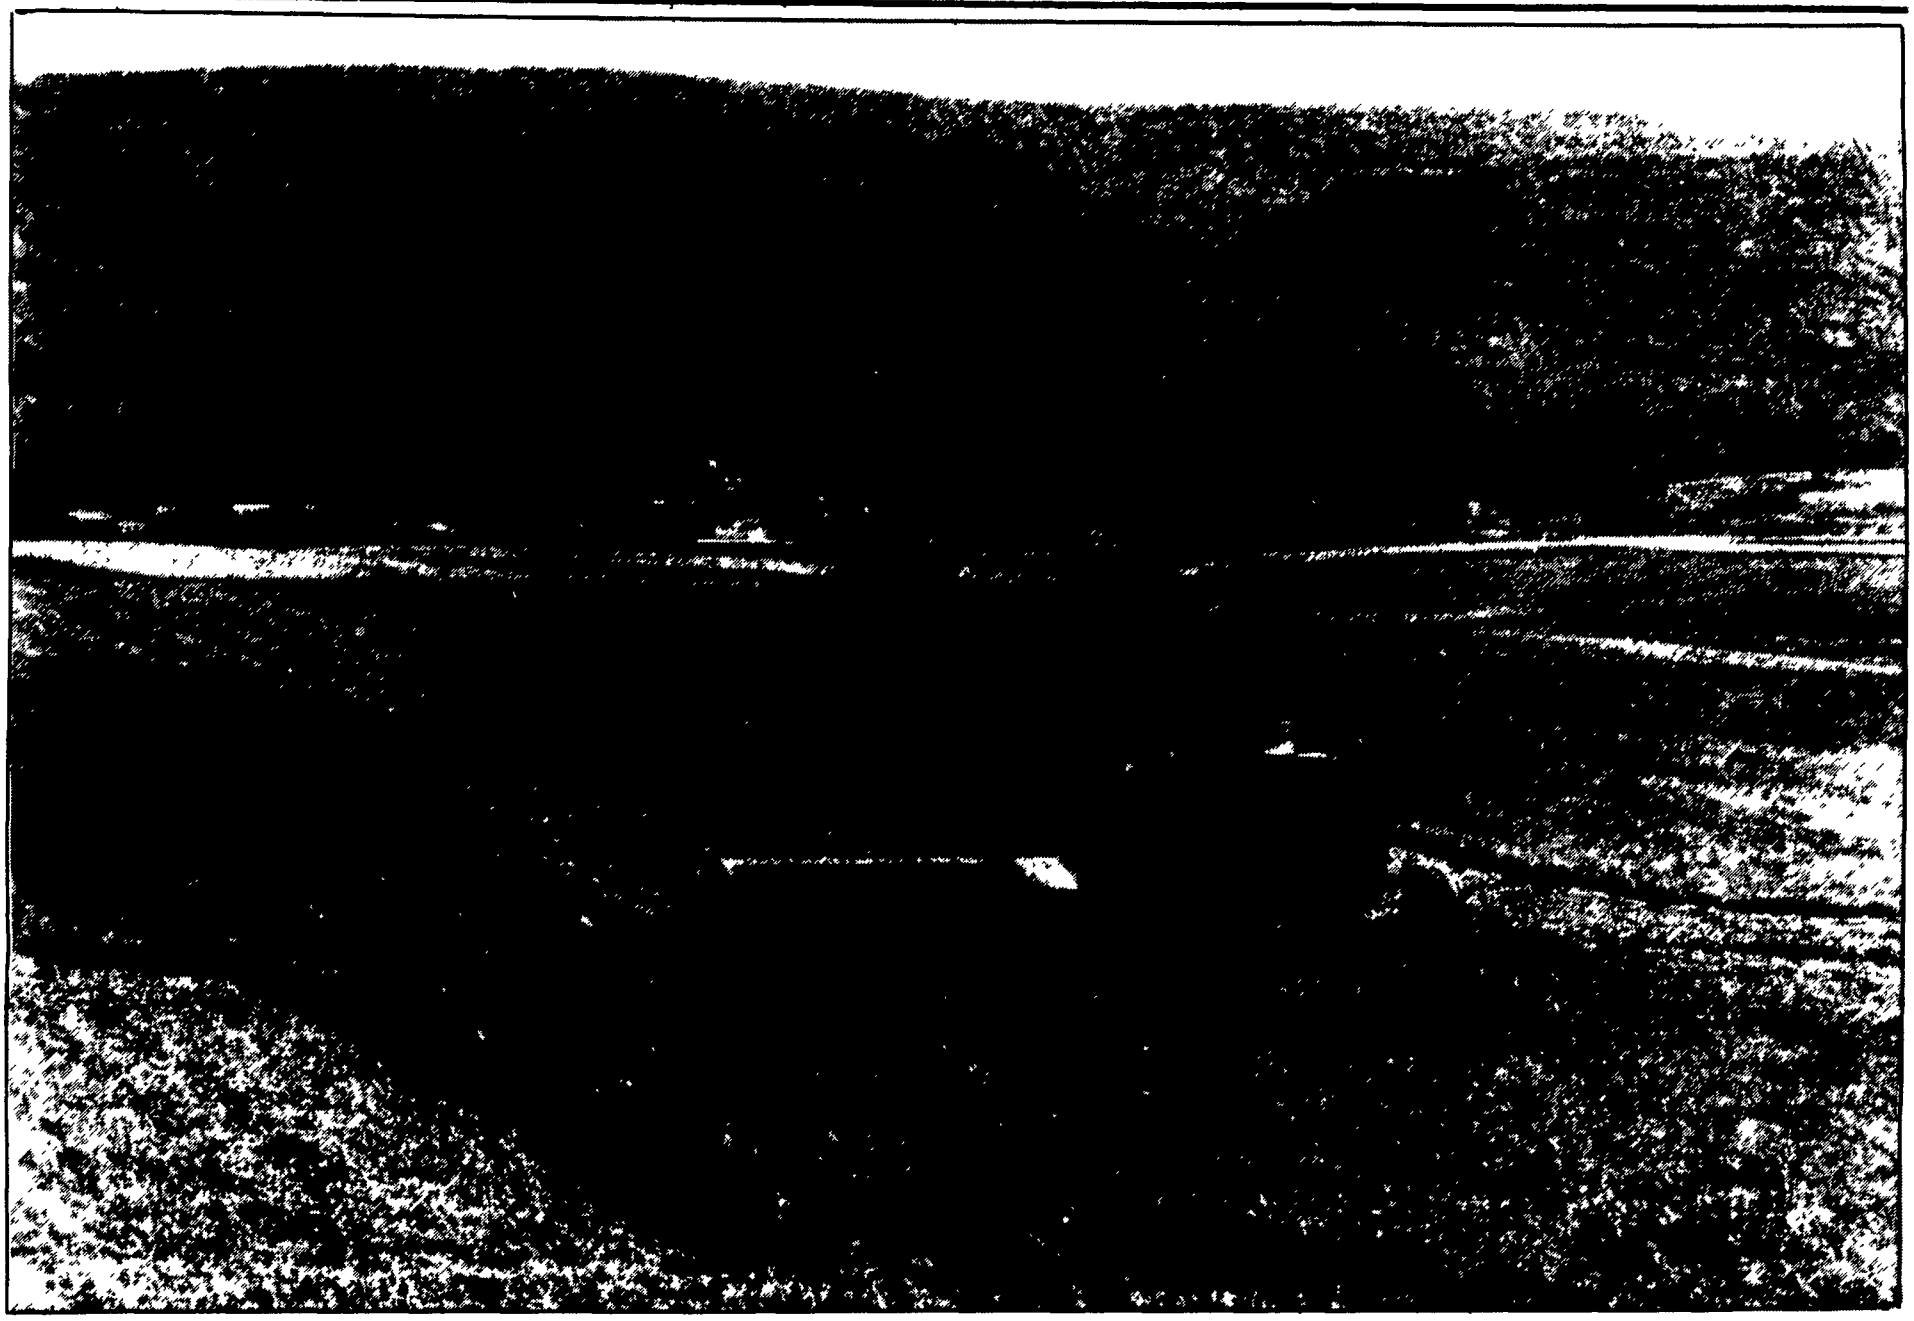
Lancaster Farming

Vol. 41 No. 50 | Four Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 19, 1996 | $27.50 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy



Gorgeous, clear weather with bright sun shining on the many shades of colored leaves that have decorated the hills and valleys of the region has made this week one of the most inspiring seasons of the year. Corn conditions continue to be mostly good to excellent, according the the Pennsylvania weekly crop and weather report from the state statistics service. Silo filling and harvest for high moisture corn continue. And farmers in the Berks, Lehigh Counties, as well as in other places, also started to shell corn. Yields were reported good.

Winter small grain seeding continued at a slow pace because many farmers preferred to harvest corn and make that last cutting of hay while they postponed seeding wheat and barley.

Soybean harvest continued but was behind normal schedules. Pasture growth slowed with the cooler weather, and some farmers were feeding hay to supplement pasture feed.

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
OCTOBER 16, 1996

Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers steady; good demand for steers, moderate for heifers. In stark contrast to last week very few Brahma cross in the feeder cattle supply. Calves steady to 1.00 lower; good demand but an abundance of calves. Feeder flesh medium to slightly thin and typical. Calf flesh medium to very fleshy with many in maximum flesh. Fleshy calf demand good and the best in two years. Calf price structure about the same as last year at this time; yearling structure 3.00-4.00 lower than last year. Quality of supply much improved with better genetics but calf flesh a detriment. Weigh condition full to mostly average. Weather has been perfect for completion of wheat drilling state-wide. Many fields in central Oklahoma are up with several in full ground cover. Many calves will be turned out within the next four weeks but may be more calves available than early wheat. Western Oklahoma just completing planting and will be needing prolonged Indian summer and moisture to get late November grazing. Slaughter cows firm to 1.50 higher. Slaughter bulls steady to 1.00 lower. Demand good for slaughter cows with a battle between the north and south buyers. Several old cull cows in supply. Top dressing slaughter bulls not well tested. Total of 875 cows and bulls sold with 65 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 14,100; last week 12,152; last year 11,003. Supply consisted of 53 percent yearlings and calves over 600 lbs; 41 percent calves under 600 lbs; 6 percent cows and bulls. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCTOBER 21-27, 1996

FULL HUNTER'S MOON, OCT. 26.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME ENDS

Until 2 00 A.M. on October 27, we've been adding an hour to our days for Daylight Saving Time. Now we "fall back" and lose an hour as we slide into the dark days of autumn and winter. Ancient Druids worried that the Sun might disappear entirely over the course of the winter and leave them in complete darkness. From these fears came the ritual bonfires and candlelightings (jack-o'-lanterns) that are part of many holiday celebrations today, all originally intended to help bolster the Sun's energies and dispel evil spirits.

"Turn up the lights; I don't want to go home in the dark." – reputed last words of O Henry (Wm Sydney Porter, d 1910)

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Put candles in the freezer before using to make them burn longer.

PUMPKIN MOLASSES PIE

2 nine-inch piecrusts, unbaked
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
3/4 teaspoon ginger
3 eggs
1-1/2 cups pureed cooked pumpkin
1-1/2 cups light cream
3 tablespoons molasses
whipped cream (optional)

Preheat oven to 400° F Bake piecrusts, weighted with pie beans, for 10 minutes. Remove weights, prick crusts, and bake another 10 minutes. Cool. Combine sugar, spices, and pumpkin. Beat together eggs, cream, and molasses. Combine two mixtures and beat. Divide filling between pie shells and bake for 10 minutes Reduce heat to 350° and bake 30 minutes, or until a knife comes out clean. Cool. Serve with whipped cream, if desired. Makes 2 nine-inch pies.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A white frost never lasts more than three days.

The full Moon brings fair weather.

Full Moon in October without a frost, no frost till full Moon in November.

When soot falls down the chimney, rain is near.

Turnips like a dry bed but a wet head.

OPINION

Future Vision

At the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives annual meeting this week, their executive director, Crystal Smithmyer, presented a heartfelt report of her experiences with farmers and the farm. In the opening of her talk she mentioned a visit with Sam Minor a well-known western Pennsylvania dairyman who expressed the desire for the Council to find the right people to move the industry forward. We pick up the conversation in Crystal's own words.

"But what I suspect, deep down, is that most of all he (Sam Minor) cares for the farmer, just like himself, who is just trying to make a good living while doing what he or she believes their vocation to be.

"I can certainly relate to that. On Sunday, with the incredible golds and reds of fall unfolding in the trees around us, I walked with my two young children through the potato fields as we followed their daddy and the harvester around the fields. This time of year, it's a daily ritual that after work or on the weekends, if the wind isn't too bitter or it isn't yet dark, that the three of us trek off to the field with a snack and a drink for Dad to just spend some time near him as he tries desparately to get the harvest in before the first snow flies.

"My nearly four year old son, Eli, races up and down the rows, picking up small potatoes and attempting to throw them at his uncles and their buddies as they ride the harvester and trucks. And my almost two year old Molly sees life in her own sweet time as we stop to examine (nearly) every rock and bug and bush before us.

"Their heritage — and their future — rest in the earth at their feet. But it also rests with each of you who have so courageously accepted the responsibility of providing leadership to the farming organizations that support our being on the farm. And so, like Sam, I trust that you will have the faith and good sense to look ahead — and I mean some distance ahead — and not just a few feet in front of you — to make the right decisions for the long-term good of your farms, your cooperatives and their supporting organizations.

"As most of you can tell, I'm pretty young, not yet thirty and still getting knocked around pretty hard learning life's tough lessons. One that I've struggled with, and been educated by pretty severely in the past few years has been this need to look farther ahead, not just at my feet. When my mom got cancer before she was forty and died before she was fifty I was filled with this desperation to live life a bit like a person possessed to get all my living done before it was taken from me. I was always running around thinking it can't get any worse, or it can't get any better, and you know what? Things would get worse — lots worse. Or I would experience joy unlike I'd never believed possible.

"So what does all this have to do with PCC? As we face some very difficult decisions about the organization's future in the coming months I expect that there will be moments, like a few I've had already, when I stare at the very real possibility that an organization that has served farmers for over six decades will fold and fade into the wind.

"And there will be other moments, like many I have had in my five + years with the Council when I am consumed by the excitement and vitality expressed through the people that we serve as our work touches their lives and, truly, hope springs anew for our farms and farmers and the cooperative community.

"And it will be those moments that will carry me, and others, forward as we explore new possibilities and partnerships that will provide support to the cooperative members.

"As I though about what I would say to you today I attempted to look critically at this job and the organization to think about what we had achieved this past year. As I reflected, images of people that I had touched through this work kept flitting through my mind:

"The young farmer who had first come to a conference shy and reticent, who, now with some training and opportunity stood before my "new" young farmers and confidently and articulately talked about his work with the Ag Awareness project and his pleasure in conducting workshops to the eager educators who wanted to know how they could share the message of agriculture and cooperatives.

"The youth scholar who went on to be first-alternate in the national ambassador competition. I had helped coach this young man, and when he "only" placed second I felt in my heart his disappointment. So I sent him a copy of Dr. Seus's "Oh the Places You'll Go," and I prayed, gave him the hope and confidence to never fear trying to achieve that which may seem unattainable. And, when, at the closing ceremonies of this year's youth institute he and his fellow lead scholars read from the book to encourage and inspire the seventy-five youth he had been charged to lead, I felt that we had indeed served some purpose.

"And finally, I remembered a young woman who with her husband attended this year's YCL conference. During the opening segments when self-introductions were required her looks to the planning committee were lethal for making her talk before the group. And during the brief moments that she spoke she literally quivered with fright. A metamorphasis truly occured as we watched her get involved and gain confidence and feel some place to belong in her husband's farming world. And my joy knew no bounds when they came to me near at the end of the conference and said — several times — that they really wanted to come back and they had a great experience.

"You folks pay me to do many things as your director, all of them under the heading of adminstering the program. What that means is adminstering things like: hope, self esteem, opportunity, direction, understanding, self confidence and ownership.

"Now if this all sounds a bit mushy and warm fuzzy to you I suggest that when you sit in your board rooms or offices or ponder while you milk the cows or plough the fields that those words that I just mentioned to you are the soul of what you do. And when bottom-line and

Now Is The Time

To Plant Cover Crops

Growing cover crops offers many advantages to the farmer at a very small cost, according to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

Cover crops help to manage nitrogen. Depending on the species used, a cover crop may either add nitrogen or conserve nitrogen in the soil.

A legume cover crop may add 80 to 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre with a value of $25 to $30 per acre in added fertility alone.

If the soil contains high levels of nitrogen, a grass cover crop (small grains) will capture nitrogen and hold it until the next growing season. Cover crops also make good feed.

A cover crop harvested as a pasture, hay or silage crop makes a high quality economical feed. When fed to livestock, they provide additional home grown feed which reduces the amount of purchased feed.

In addition, cover crops increase the soil organic matter, help to reduce weeds and reduce soil erosion. Cover crops provide all these benefits at only a few dollars per acre cost in seed and planting expenses.

To Attend Animal Housing Expo

Northeast farmers may learn more about how to remodel and expand their livestock, dairy and poultry facilities at the fifth annual Animal Housing Expo.

The expo will be held October 29-30 at the Lebanon Fairgrounds, Lebanon, PA. It is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and agri-businesses.

Admission is free and the hours for the expo are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The expo will feature approximately 40 commercial exhibitors, presentations by nationally known and local experts and a variety of educational demonstrations and exhibits.

Educational topics include odor control, obtaining building permits, milking parlor for every budget, nutrient management, greenhouses and other dairy shelter alternatives and your family business goals.

To Control Diseases in Wheat

Farmers may use a few simple strategies this fall to help ensure a healthy stand of wheat according to Dr. Elwood Hatley, Penn State agronomist.

The first step to a healthy wheat crop is the selection of a wheat variety which is resistant to the common diseases found in the area.

The Penn State Agronomy Guide lists most of the common diseases and ranks most of the sold varieties in the state. Also, planting wheat during the recommended time will help prevent diseases.

Wheat that is planted too early has a greater potential to become infected with several diseases. Cold weather will kill rust but has little effect on powdery mildew.

When mildew becomes a problem in the fall, most of the time it will return full force in the spring. Fungicide treatment of wheat will control powdery mildew.

Fields which were planted with seed treated with a fungicide out performed those not treated. However, the best treatment is still the use of a mildew resistant variety. On the other hand it is just as important not to delay planting.

When wheat or any crop is planted too late, it may not have sufficient time for growth to withstand cold winter weather. If wheat is planted late, it is recommended that the seeding rate be increased by 30 percent to help offset the winter plant loss.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Respect cannot be learned, purchased or acquired - it can only be earned."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

SITTING ON SCORPIONS
October 20, 1996

SITTING ON SCORPIONS
October 20, 1996
Background Scipture:
Ezekiel 2:1 through 3:2
Devotional Reading:
Ezekiel 3:16-21

From the perspective of history, it might appear to us that being the prophet Ezekiel would have been a rewarding experience. Although he lived more than 2,500 years ago, his name is one of the best remembered in Judeo-Christian history, his book is one of the most formidable of all the prophets in the Old Testament, and he had been celebrated in sacred art and song, including the popular spirituals, "Ezekiel Saw The Wheel" and "Dry Bones."

But Ezekiel probably didn't see his role that way. A prophet's life is not a bowl of cherries! All of us should be grateful that God has not called any of us to be prophets! — or hasn't he?

At least God didn't give Ezekiel any false expectations. He told him exactly what kind of life he was facing: "Son of man, I send you to the people of Israel, to a nation of rebels, who have rebelled against me ... The people also are impudent and stubborn" (Ezekiel 2:3,4). Can you imagine how a ministerial candidate would respond if he were told that by his bishop or ecclesiastical superiors? It might be enough to make him reconsider his vocation. And in God's call to Ezekiel he characterizes the people of Israel as a "rebellious house" three times, using the terms "rebels" and "rebelled against me" once each. Not an inviting prospect.

BE NOT AFRAID

But God tells Ezekiel that he is not to let this stand in his way. "And whether they hear or refuse to hear (for they are a rebellious house) they will know that there has been a prophet among them. And you, son of man, be not afraid of them nor be afraid of their words, though briars and thorns are with you and you sit upon scorpions" (2:6). Being God's prophet is going to be a painful experience.

Sometimes the tasks to which God calls us is like sitting on scorpions. Given a choice, we might prefer the scorpions. Maybe it is a matter of saying something that should be said, but is not likely to be received gladly. Years ago at a wedding reception, I was introduced to a man by a mutual friend who said, "Larry, this is Judge Blank" (not his real name), "he's the guy who keeps the niggers in their place here." Shocked, I shook the offered hand in silence, knowing I should say something, but not wanting to embarrass my friend in public.

CONSEQUENCES

Many times since then I have thought about what as a Christian I should or might have said. That opportunity to speak as a Christian had came and went and I failed to speak because I didn't want to rock the boat. It was only many years later that in a similar situation my remorse over that incident enabled me to say that I found another remark offensive. And I survived the experience!

There are lots of times in life when God wants us to speak or act, but we are held back by our fear of the consequences — what people will think or say or do. People, we think, will not like us, — and often we are right in thinking that. But God says to us what he said to Ezekiel: "And you shall speak my words to them, whether they hear or refuse to hear" (2:7).

In other words, the results of our witness are in God's hands, not ours. If people do not respond positively to our witness, that is between them and God. It would be gratifying if they did, but if not, that isn't the end of our world. Far better for us to do God's will and be rejected by others, than for us to curry their favor and thereby offend the Lord.

It is better to sit on scorpions and contend with briars and thorns than to fail to do or be what we know God wants of us.

Animal Housing Expo Oct. 29-30

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Producers can learn more about how to remodel and expand their livestock, dairy, and poultry facilities at the fifth annual Animal Housing Expo, Oct. 29-30, at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

The expo is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and various agribusinesses. Hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is free.

Designing and constructing animal housing facilities is a majot financial commitment. It is something that many producers will do only once or twice in their career. Thus, it should be done right the first time.

The building and remodeling decisions producers make today will have a significant impact on how competitive their business will be in years to come. It will affect the health and productivity of their herd or flock, worker output, public relations, cash flow, and farm profits.

Producers should take time to look at a lot of different facilities and talk to a lot of people before they make major remodeling and expansion decisions.

The Animal Housing Expo helps producers accomplish this by providing them the opportunity to:

- Visit approximately 40 commercial exhibitors who can supply the products and services they may need.
- Hear presentations from nationally known and local experts.
- Observe a variety of educational demonstrations and exhibits.
- Share ideas with producers in attendance.

Topics and speakers for Oct. 29 include:

- 10 a.m. "Practical Solutions to Control Cattle, Poultry & Swine Odors" by Mike Williams, North Carolina State University.
- 11 a.m. "A Milking Parlor for Every Budget" by Dour Reinemann, University of Wisconsin.
- 11 a.m. "Swine AI Demonstration" by Ken Kephart, Penn State University.
- 12:30 p.m. "Hoof Trimming Demonstration" by Dale Moore, Penn State University.
- 1:30 p.m. "Obtaining Permits for Agricultural Expansion" by Tim Royer, Timber Tech Engineering, Inc. Womelsdorf.

Topics and speakers for Oct. 30 include:

- 10 a.m. "Nutirent Management Issues for Cattle, Poultry and Swine Producers" by Mike Brubaker, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Ephrata, and Robert Graves, Penn State University.
- 11 a.m. "Your Family Business Goals" by Don Rodgers, First Pioneer Farm Credit, ACA, Enfield, Conn.
- 12:30 p.m. "Hoof Trimming Demonstration" by Dr. Brian Reed, Agricultural Veterinary Associates, Manheim.
- 1:30 p.m. "Greenhouse and Other Dairy Shelter Alternatives" by Robert Graves, Penn State University.

For more information about the Expo and exhibit details, contact Expo Chair Dan McFarland, Penn State Cooperative Extension, York, at (717) 840-7408.

Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Hold District Meeting

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WAKEFIELD (Lancaster Co.) — "The most important people are you — the producers," said Russell Wachter, president of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Inc.

Wachter said that just as his name means watchman, it has been his ambition to look out for the producers' interests in the cooperative. During the district meeting held in Wakefield on Tuesday, Wachter elaborated on the efforts to always keep members' interests in the forefront

With milk prices up, Wachter said the cooperative decided to pass along the 74 cents in over-order premiums now instead of waiting to include the bonus in the 13th check distributed in February. Although over-order premium checks were distributed early, members can expect the 13th check in February to be substantial from special allocations.

In his presentation, "The Year At a Glance," George Walgrove, secretary and general manager, reviewed the events that affected the cooperative during the past year.

Despite last year's dour forecast by economists, milk prices have set new records with $15.37 in September and are expected to exceed $18 in November.

Walgrove explained how the events on the West Coast resulted in a domino effect to raise the basic formula price determined by cheese in Wisconsin. The events included a succession of heat waves in some major areas in the country, which resulted in higher grain prices and less quality. Several producers sold out, which resulted in less milk production in states such as Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Montana. Also, the cooperative sent more milk into the Southeast than ever before in its history.

Although the market has softened in the last two weeks and cheese prices are expected to drop, Walgrove said that he expects higher milk prices will be maintained for several months and there will not be a plummet in prices.

The butter market influences the milk price also. While butter prices have risen significantly, Walgrove does not believe that is entirely good.

"Consumer resistance grows if prices are too high. We don't want to lose sales," he said.

Walgrove also spoke of the frustration he felt while the Farm Bill was being hammered out and the effects it will have on the dairy industry during the next few years.

The 10 federal orders on the East Coast, he predicts, will be consolidated into three.

Walgrove reported that Marva Maid, the bottling division for the cooperative had a record year last year. New markets were established in schools and military.

The company is experimenting with ultra high temperature (UHT) pasteurization of products. At this point, the cooperative is not willing to invest in the expensive equipment required to produce the product but is paying another plant to package UHT products for them.

The cooperative leaders pledged to work to get the most out of the market place to return to members.

"We can't rest on the laurels of the past," Walgrove said of the company's decision to establish an in-resident person to answer questions about trading and the futures markets. New products and world trade are also being pursued.

To stay on the cutting edge of change, Walgrove said, "There may be strategic alliances with other companies in the future but it must benefit them and us."

In other business, quality awards were given to David R. and Ruth G. King, Joseph B. Osborn, and to Marvin S. Nolt.

Thomas and Jennifer Lawrence, Young Cooperator runners-up, talk about the strength of the cooperative and how to best utilize its services.

Maryland Dairy Task Force To Announce Findings

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — A summary of findings and recommendations by the Task Force on Maryland's Dairy Industry are to made public during a public meeting scheduled to be held from 10 a.m. until noon, Monday, Oct. 21, at the Winchester Hall in Frederick, Md.

The announcement of the public meeting was made recently by Lewis Riley, Maryland secretary of agriculture.

The Winchester Hall is located at 12 East Church Street in Frederick.

According to the news release, the Maryland General Assembly established last year the task force for the purpose of developing recommendations for methods to maintain and improve Maryland's dairy industry.

The task force is comprised of representatives of producers, distributors and consumers of dairy products, and has been meeting on a monthly basis since November. The task force expects to present their final report to the governor and the legislature later this year.

"I encourage anyone who is interested in the future of the dairy industry in Maryland to attend this meeting to learn about the work of the task force and express their views about how we can all work together to keep the dairy industry strong in our state," Riley said in the release.

For more information on the public meeting or for directions, call Pat McMillan, at the Maryland Department of Agriculture, (401) 841-5880.

DMI, MilkPEP Collaborate To Boost Fluid Milk Sales

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The boards of Dairy Management Inc., which manage marketing and research programs on behalf of America's dairy farmers, and the MilkPEP board, which administers the "Milk Mustache" effort on behalf of United States fluid milk processors, have approved two resolutions to work toward the common goal of increasing fluid milk sales.

One resolution calls for DMI and MilkPEP to jointly use the same research and market data in developing a common understanding of consumer segments for developing future marketing plans.

This research is the product of a major DMI-funded dairy industry segmentation study which details the motivations, attitudes and behavior of milk, cheese and butter consumers, as well as channels of distribution and volume opportunities.

This data will be used this winter in the marketing planning process involving national, state and regional dairy organizations. In the meantime, DMI and MilkPEP are to coordinate their current programs where opportunities exist.

A second resolution commits DMI and MilkPEP to continue the Fluid Milk Strategic Thinking Project, formed to bring dairy farmers and processors together to identify and break through barriers to fluid milk products through licensing and cobranding.

In this joint initiative, MilkPEP is responsible for the product development process, which includes: securing the licensing and cobranding relationships; conducting research; packaging; product formulation, when necessary; and gaining processor participation.

DMI, which will actively participate in all areas, will have primary responsbility for funding the launch of new products into the marketplace.

Under this plan, the individual processor would be responsible for local marketing and promotional activity.

The initiative for DMI and MilkPEP to coordinate their activities began in January 1996, when both boards agreed to a joint planning process for coordinating the fluid milk programs of the two organizations. The ultimate goal is to increase fluid milk sales.

Penn State Dairy Club Seeks Award Nominations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nominations are being sought by the Penn State Dairymen's Club for consideration for the club's annual service award.

The deadline for nominations is Nov. 1. There is no specific format for submitting nominations. Suggested areas for discussion in a nomination could include such things as the nominee's leadership in the agricultural community, personal involvement in the dairy industry, and personal achievement and excellence.

All nominations should be sent to Peter Witmer, International Trade Specialist, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110.

The annual award is presented to those who work toward the advancement and betterment of the dairy industry. The award also recognizes three distinct areas of the dairy industry — producers, educators, and the rest of the industry, which includes processing, manufacturing, marketing and distribution, as well as a spectrum of support industries.

Each year the award rotates between the three major segments of the dairy world.

This year the award is to recognize the efforts of an individual in the industry segment.

Nominations can include retirees as well as those still active in their chosen area.

Any person is eligible to nominate candidates for this award, and nominees do not have to be Penn State alumni.

This year marks the seventh award. Previous winners include Robert Patton (Monsanto Company), William Conyngham (Hillside Farm), Larry Specht (Penn State), Dean Amick (Pa.DHIA), Sam Williams (Bryncoed Farm), and Steve Spencer (Penn State).

The winner of the award is to be recognized at the Penn State Dairymen's Club annual meeting, scheduled to be held Nov. 15. (Site not included in news release.)

Cooperative Council

currently serving as acting assistant to the regional director for northeastern counties. He is responsible for dairy programming for the six hundred dairy farms in Bradford County. Known for his strong programs in dairy feeding, milking management, mastitis control, and dairy housing, he also managed the 4-H dairy program for nearly twenty years.

Guffey has worked closely with dairy cooperatives in the county and has been very involved with the Sulbra Council of Cooperatives and the Sulbra Youth Council. In 1994, Guffey and his wife Marilyn joined extension colleagues from Pennsylvania and across the U.S. in helping the agricultural sector of Poland to adjust to a free market economy and prepare to compete in world trade. They spent six months as an on-site advisor to the Polish Agricultural Advisory service. The Guffeys have three children and four grandchildren.

Also new this year was the Horizon Award. Laura England, public relations manager for Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, received this award. She is responsible for communicating the cooperative's message to members and the general public. Prior to joining Atlantic's staff, she was an editor at Lancaster Farming covering dairy and livestock news.

England is president of the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations and is vice president of the Bucks-Montgomery Council of PCC. She serves on the communications committee of the National Milk Producers Federation and has served on committees for the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. She is the immediate past president of the Cooperative Communicators Association.

England and her husband Joe have one son, Matthew.

A service recognition was given to Dr. Kate Smith, assistant professor at Penn State and director of the cooperative business education and research program.

In his luncheon address Lyon observed that today most of the existing cooperatives were formed in the 1930's to the 1950's and are mature and facing massive restructuring. These cooperative enterprises are faced with changing demographics and outdated capital investment. But he proposed that a new wave of cooperative development could do much to rebuild our rural communities.

"As current cooperative leaders, you have the obligation to enhance and protect the owner user's investment," Lyon said. "Whether it be through consolidation, federating, expanding, or downsizing, you need to do whatever is necessary for this protection. I do believe cooperatives need to more clearly define the measure of stockholder value and leaders must give first consideration to their fiduciary responsibility.

"In cooperative mergers, leaders often concentrate on first year savings, how many board seats each side will have, what the management structure will be, and how to preserve the cooperative's identity. Rarely is great consideration given to long term shareholder value and making that the primary determinant in consummating the transaction."

Lyon said that it is obvious in cooperatives today that members often support excessive capital investment and governing structures that make efficient use of new technology difficult. But he proposed the cooperative holding cooperative as an alternative in a way that allows technology to function internally without drastically changing the end user product or service quality and presence.

The impetus of the holding cooperatrive concept is to provide a structure for centralized internal operations of compatible cooperative business entities in a format that takes advantage of technological efficiencies but also provides the system to retain the identity and to a great extent the governance of the joining cooperatives. With distinct statements of operations and product and member service development, each cooperative under the holding cooperative head maintains separate equity pools, and adequate financial protection among the subsidiary cooperatives. This can be accomplished internally while at the same time strengthening the product and service quality to the member owners of each of these organizations. Value has been added to the equity base of these owners.

"The merger of financially stable cooperatives on increased shareholder value is the absolute most efficient means of positioning mature cooperatives for the 21st century," Lyon said. "However, when the issue of shareholder value becomes cloudy, I believe the holding cooperative becomes a viable alternative.

"Cooperatives hold promise in revitalizing rural America. They loom as a major contributor to the solution to the road back to fiscal solvency and greater social justice.

"If we are to make the future of our people as promising as the past, we must replace greed with compassion. Productivity must be the basis for new wealth. Short term quick fixes must be replaced with long term social and economic strategies. The growing division between the haves and the have nots must be reversed. Effective self-help provides for genuine accommodation rather than confrontation. Cooperatives answered the call in addressing these needs in an earlier generation and can again if leadership is willing to become engaged.

"We are in transition from the external enemies of the Cold War to the internal enemies of health care, child care, welfare, senior care, and access to technology. In our current business environment, cooperatives are an attractive alternative for people fed up with the profit grabbers and the me-first mentality.

"Cooperatives can provide such a profound conscience to our current business mentality. They can give every user a voice in the governance and policy development. They can allow the users to elect people who really believe in the principles of cooperative enterprise. They can retain the capital within the service or community for which it was intended. There need not be a skimming off the top to the deterrent of the users and employees. There is no better way to empower people in their own best interest than through cooperation."

In the president's report at the annual meeting, Randall Meabon said that as the bottom line issues become so critical, let's not lose sight of the sometimes less tangible benefits we reap, one hundred fold, from cooperative education. We will work diligently to never give up bridging the generation gap between our predecessor cooperatives and founders.

Executive director, Crystal Smithmyer, said that as a stakeholder in PCC, you have the right and responsibility to help envision the best possible way to meet member education, networking, leadership development and co-op development needs. The Council's underlying and unchanging reason for being has always been to support and serve the people that make up the cooperative community.

Editor's Note: Smithmyer also gave a moving tribute to farmers and their families that appears as our editorial for this week, begining on page A10.

Marek's Can Affect Any Poultry Operation

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Deadly Marek's Disease can infect any type of poultry operation at any time. As a result, managers should implement careful prevention strategies to ensure Marek's doesn't turn into a long-term disease problem in the house, according to a noted veterinarian.

Research is still incomplete on exactly why Marek's continues to plague poultry flocks throughout the country, according to a leading veterinarian who has studied the disease in commercial flocks.

Dr. Bernie Beckman, DVM with Hy-Line International, Dallas Center, Iowa, spoke to more than 30 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives on Monday at the Poultry Health and Management Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

Marek's can affect single-age houses of any size or multi- age growout sites. "I've seen it come up in any one of those situations," said Beckman. "No situation is immune to Marek's."

The disease affects layers and broilers. One of the reasons it has become prevalent is the continuous trend to put "poultry together intensively," said the veterinarian. What is so surprising is that the disease is not confined to younger birds, but can also spread between older, even adult birds.

Clinical signs of the disease include emaciated birds and high mortality. The disease can show up as inflammation of the iris of the eye, but mostly as tumors in the bird, especially in the liver as nodules and in the nerves.

Marek's is a viral disease, caused by a cell-associated herpes virus. The disease shows up as a viral tumor disease of chickens only but can show up as tumors and or nerve dysfunction at any age.

One of the things that puzzles scientists, as Beckman showed using two cushioned footballs to illustrate, is that somehow, as large as the RNA of the cell structure of Marek's is, it can fit into the smaller, normal RNA present in healthy tissue.

The virus is spread from the birds' dander. Any chicken from 1-2 weeks old can become infected, shed the virus, and infect other chickens. It is spread to other chickens or into the environment.

For layers, the disease is spread most probably by "airborne exposure, and birds are most susceptible the first week of life," said Beckman. What makes control strategies difficult is that most vaccines take one week to become effective — which emphasizes the importance of keeping poultry houses Marek's-free.

In many cases, some farms can be free of Marek's no matter what the disease control strategies. Beckman said he knows of farms that have employed the latest and most intense cleaning and disinfection (C&D) procedures and still come up house positive in tests for the virus.

"One type of virus could affect only some people, and some people see the problem and others don't," he said.

Scientists still "don't know what turns the virus on and off," and what causes outbreaks in flocks, according to Beckman. But several factors are identified: levels of stress in the birds and the levels of immunosuppression in the flock.

In many cases, early field exposure could provide natural levels of flock immunity, but the word is still incomplete and more studies are necessary.

While scientists continue to work on developing genetic resistance to Marek's, some of the strategies poultry house managers can use include the use of all-in, all-out in combination with strict biosecurity and use of vaccine in the flocks.

Beckman recommended that managers read the book, "Biosecurity In The Poultry Industry," written by the American Association of Avian Pathologists, available from the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center. (To order a copy for $15, ask for Kim at New Bolton, 610-444-4282.)

The virus continues to evolve and that is one of the areas Beckman continues to study. "It's always changing — it's hard for me even to keep up with it," said Beckman. The continuing presence of Marek's in the broiler industry is of concern, indicating the virus is changing, becoming very virulent. Those types of very virulent strains are making their presence known in broiler houses in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Nebraska, and in the Southeast.

Deadly Marek's Disease can infect any type of poultry operation at any time. Dr. Bernie Beckman, DVM with Hy-Line International, Dallas Center, Iowa, center, spoke to more than 30 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives on Monday at the Poultry Health and Management Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant. At left is Mark Lovette, live production manager, Tyson and at right is Guy Martin, producer service manager, Sauder's.

What surprises veterinarians such as Beckman is that normal preventive strategies sometimes aren't enough. "Marek's is not prevented by normal C&D, all-in, all-out and bivalent vaccine," he said. Mortality levels if left untreated even to bird adulthood can rise to 40 percent.

Houses aren't well protected against Marek's with the widely used HVT/SB-1 vaccine. Managers can find better protection from Marek's with the European Rispen vaccine. The trivalent vaccine program is the most protective, Beckman indicated.

Researchers continue to build a better bird, more resistant to Marek's. In the future, said Beckman, "we can make birds fully resistant to Marek's, but it's going to take time."

Brosius Announces 13 Counties For CHEMSWEEP

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius announced that 13 counties have been selected for the 1997 "Chemsweep" program, which enables farmers in the affected counties to safely dispose of outdated and unwanted pesticides.

"This program is good for farmers, consumers, and the environment," Brosius said. He noted that the 13 counties scheduled for the 1997 cleanup are Allegheny, Beaver, Cameron, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Cumberland, Elk, Forest, Montgomery, Perry, Susquehanna, and Warren.

The addition of these counties brings to 56 the total number of Pennsylvania counties which have participated since the beginning of the program.

Registratin is under way through county Penn State Cooperative Extension offices through Dec. 31. Applications for the program will be mailed to farmers in the affected counties in October or can be obtained from county extension offices or the Agriculture Department.

Collections are funded through pesticide product registration fees paid by chemical manufacturers, and do not place a financial burden on farmers or taxpayers. Farmers, Christmas tree growers, fish hatchery managers, mushroom producers, nursery, and greenhouse operations and commercial pesticide enterprises are eligible to participate.

Collection of pesticides from farms which sign up during the registration period will take place in the spring of 1997. Growers may be instructed to deliver their unwanted pesticides to a central collection site or have their pesticides picked up directly from their storage locations by MSE Environmental, Inc. — a hazardous waste disposal company under contract with the department.

Since November 1995, more than 330,000 pounds of waste pesticides were collected, bringing total collections to 430,000 pounds since the program began in 1992.

Chemsweep is picking up the pesticides inventoried in the 11 counties whose application period ended in March.

◆ FARM FORUM ◆

Editor,

Recently, several news stories have been written regarding higher prices that consumers are paying for dairy products. After the average person read the stories, they would have to assume the reason for the price increases is related to higher prices the dairy farmers are paying for the feed grains. Furthermore the consumers would assume, because the dairy farmers are paying an accelerated price for grains, this would automatically mean a higher price paid to dairy farmers.

Unfortunately, this assumption is a far cry from the truth. The reality is — The prices paid to dairy farmers does not in any way reflect the actual cost of producing milk. During the last 20 years many dairy farmers and some farm organizations have been trying to have Congress implement a new pricing formula that would truly represent the dairymen's actual cost of producing milk.

Such a formula would return a fair price to the dairy farmer, and at the same time the formula would stabilize prices to consumers.

In reality one year ago when feed prices started to increase to the farmers, the prices paid to dairy farmers for milk certainly did not keep pace with the cost of grain. Actual prices paid to dairy farmers in March of 1996 was $13.48 per cwt., while in March of 1981 the price was $13.20 per cwt. This means in March of '96 dairy farmers were paid approximately ½ cent a quart more for milk than they received 15 years earlier. For the last 5 months prices paid to dairy farmers have increased. The main reason for the price increase is because of less milk being produced nationally. The reduced proportion can in all probability be traced to weather conditions across the country and in many cases dairy farmers are feeding less grain to their cows, consequently less milk is being produced.

When there is a sharp decrease in the production of milk nationally (3-4%) this places a squeeze on the manufacturing plants in the upper mid-west which in essence forms a higher price for manufactured milk in that area. Consequently this means a higher Basic Formula Price, which raises milk prices across the country.

The same thing is true in reverse — when there is more milk produced the extra milk creates less pressure on milk supplies for manufacturing plants in the upper mid-west, when the Basic Formula Price goes down, and sometimes dramatically, which, for sure creates lower prices for dairy farmers, but the lower prices to dairy farmers, is not, in many cases, reflected to consumers as they purchase dairy products.

Consumer Prices

The dramatic upswing in the price for butter is a clear example how consumers are being ripped off and the dairy farmers are being blamed.

On January 5, 1996 the Chicago Mercantile Price for a pound of butter was 80¢ per lb. By the end of June the price went as high as $1.55 per lb., which forced a dramatic increase to consumers.

Of the 75¢ per lb. increase in the wholesale price of butter, only 12¢ a lb. was received by dairy farmers.

At the same time the butter prices escalated dramatically; cheese prices remained stable, even though in most cases manufacturers pay the same price for cheese milk as they do for milk used for butter.

Fluid Milk

In Pennsylvania, the Pa. Milk Marketing Board establishes minimum prices on the retail price of milk. This minimum price is tied directly to the price that milk handlers pay for fluid milk. The retail price is adjusted ½ cent per pound (upward or downward) for every 18¢ per cwt. movement in the fluid price.

October's minimum price will be $2.67 and most likely November's price will be $2.71 per gallon.

In all probabilities these consumer retail prices will level out around $2.75 per gallon. This still is only a ¢20 a gallon increase in 6 years or 3½ ¢ per gallon average increase cost per year. Pro Ag's opinion is that consumers will pay the $2.75 per gallon for milk when they realize that the increase price will go to the dairy farmers.

However, Pro Ag is urging an investigation regarding the rip-off of consumers on the butter prices.

A survey is going on in California where consumer prices for fluid milk has gone up to $3.73 per gallon in several supermarkets, even though the farm price is cheaper than Northeastern Pennsylvania.

We in Pro Ag also feel that Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board plays a key role in maintaining reasonable prices to the consumers of milk.

DAVE SLUSSER
Manager Pa. DHIA

STATE COLLEGE (Dauphin Co.) — National DHIA is on a crusade to push a new DHIA environment that begins with significant rule changes to become effective on the first day of the new year.

But the effects on the industry in general, and DHIA members in particular, have yet to be determined or satisfactorily explained.

While a great deal of ink has been committed to print over the last year on herd profiles, reliability factors, and a 'Code of Ethics' that replaces THE RULES, the real direction for DHIA in the coming years may not be a great deal different from the direction of the old DHIA.

While no one disputes the importance of getting DHIA out of an enforcement regime that was sometimes arbitrary, often cumbersome, and always expensive, much of the current furor over DHIA's new face is related to its effect on genetic evaluations, an area that has been of steadily diminishing importance to DHIA members for years.

Under the code of ethics that replaces the old rules structure, dairymen on all types of DHIA testing plans will soon be able to custom tailor their own programs, choosing how frequently to test, how often they should ship samples to DHIA milk labs, and even how often (if ever) they may want to supervise their own test days.

Some rules, those necessary to the organizational efficiency and standardized data collection procedures for all DHIA's, will need to be retained. But for the most part these will serve as guidelines for a uniform but flexible program under which service rather than rule enforcement receives the major emphasis.

The key to understanding the new DHIA environment is this: the end user of records will now determine their value, based on comprehensive information about the conditions under which the information was collected and prepared.

Unfortunately, a number of industry sources have seized on this outlook as a justification for reduced DHIA testing.

This is unfortunate for a number of reasons. First, genetic testing is a by-product of our management program and not the purpose of DHIA. As end users, each AI unit and breed association will need to determine the genetic value of different kinds of DHIA service. Many have yet to make these decisions.

The USDA Sire Evaluation program itself has yet (if ever) to completely determine the weight assigned to all testing plans.

For example, an infrequently owner-sampled program will receive lower genetic weighting than 12 supervised 2x tests. The weighted values are yet to be resolved and will probably change over time.

Many AI organizations have not decided what differentials will be applied to programs with reduced supervisions by DHIA employees. The Holstein Association and Jersey Club will have additional requirements as well.

Our advice to farmers is: consult the end user of your DHIA records to find out what their requirements are before you change tests. DHIA can't and shouldn't answer these questions and you may very well be in for a disappointment if you change programs and find out later that your PTA or pedigree has less value than you hoped.

A second reason why the emphasis on end users is unfortunate is that all too often it causes us to look away from our own farms.

How often does your veterinarian need to evaluate Somatic Cell County to monitor mastitis control? How frequently does your vet or nutritionist need DHIA informaiton to evaluate the efficiency of your feeding, reproduction, or herd health?

Issues that are national in scope too often overlook vets, feed dealers, financial consultants and other agribusiness support people as important end users of DHIA records. And remember, the most important end user of DHIA records is you.

How valuable is your time? Do you have extra help on test day to collect data and milk samples accurately? Can you really manage your herd profitabliy if you don't have fresh information every month? Will you keep timely records without a DHIA technician on hand to prompt for it?

Every dairyman will need to wrestle with these questions, while again keeping in mind the rule: consult with the person making use of the information to determine its value. And of course, that includes taking honest council with yourself.

At this point confusion reigns among DHIA industry groups, technicians, members, and traditional allies. But this need not — and will not — be the case for Pennsyvlania DHIA.

Pennsylvania DHIA has consistently pioneered an innovative approach to DHIA testing. Our Labor Efficient Records Program was one of the first in the nation. The LER testing plan anticipates most — if not all — of the changes proposed under the new operating environment. And in Pennsylvania it will soon enter its second decade.

Pennsylvania was one of the first states to recognize later to actively promote AM/PM testing as an accurate and inexpensive official records program. Today, Pennsylvania DHIA has one of the highest percentages of herds on AP testing in the country.

For several years we have encouraged enterprising members to consider alternate test day procedures, including 3x/1x AP, partial owner supervision, partial owner sampling and the like.

Today, Pennsylvania DHIA has more herds on innovative test plans than any other DHIA affiliate in the world. As with the rest of the dairy industry, we are looking towards an exciting and certainly bumpy ride.

But we will not be leaving any of our members behind. Pennsylvania DHIA has been preparing for and living in the future dreamed of by National DHIA for a long, long time.

Young Farmers See Machinery Maintenance

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — On Tuesday, Oct. 8, the Ephrata Area Young Farmers (EAYF) ventured out in the rain to attend a meeting on "Farm Machinery Maintenance" at Adamstown John Deere Equipment, Inc.

Nelson, a farm machinery mechanic, opened the meeting with a 23-minute video on how to maintain the cooling system, all intake systems, and the fuel injection system on farm machinery. Neslon pointed out to the group that the number one oversight he has observed over the years is the failure, by farmers, to properly keep their tractors greased.

Nelson Zimmerman, another farm machinery mechanic, thoroughly reviewed, with the EAYF, the main procedure of the air conditioning unit inside the tractor.

For more information, contact Dori C. Brunken, EAYF coordinator, (717) 859-3276.

Dealers Hear About New Dairy Feed

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Purina Mills Inc. this week introduced a new type of dairy feed, "Proteus," that is targeted at reducing the amount of total crude protein fed to a dairy cow and also the amount of nitrogen eliminated through a cow's urine.

The importance of this commercial feed introduction is that it marks the first available dairy food product (to knowledge) developed with the intent of targeting consistent and reliable delivery of proteins for digestion in specific areas of the dairy cow to increase the efficiency of total protein utilization.

Purina Mills Inc. officials introduced the product along with two other product changes during a special dairy feeds seminar for Pennsylvania and regional Purina dealers, held Tuesday at the Holiday Inn-West, in Mechanicsburg.

According to officials, the Proteus product is not seen primarily as a milk-production enhancement feed.

The company said that it may be seen by dairy producers as a way to maintain high production while using less total crude protein and allowing more energy in the ration to maintain body weight.

The potential is that it could perhaps benefit milk production and also overall and reproductive health.

During a normal lactation, for a period following calving, a cow uses more energy to make milk than it can acquire through its diet. That energy comes from energy stores in the cow.

Too much dependence on body reserves can result in ketosis which can create a number of cow health problems, frequently including laminitis and foot-shunt problems.

Since only so much feed can be taken in by a dairy cow daily (usually expressed in terms of dry matter), the assumption is that if a high milk production ration can be altered to reduce the amount of protein in the ration there may be room to add more energy, and thus be able to boost some production.

That is part of the strategy being used by Purina, in that it is combining the proteus product into its line of EXT-Nuggets. The nuggets are the company's existing high-energy feed product, used to deliver high energy for more milk production.

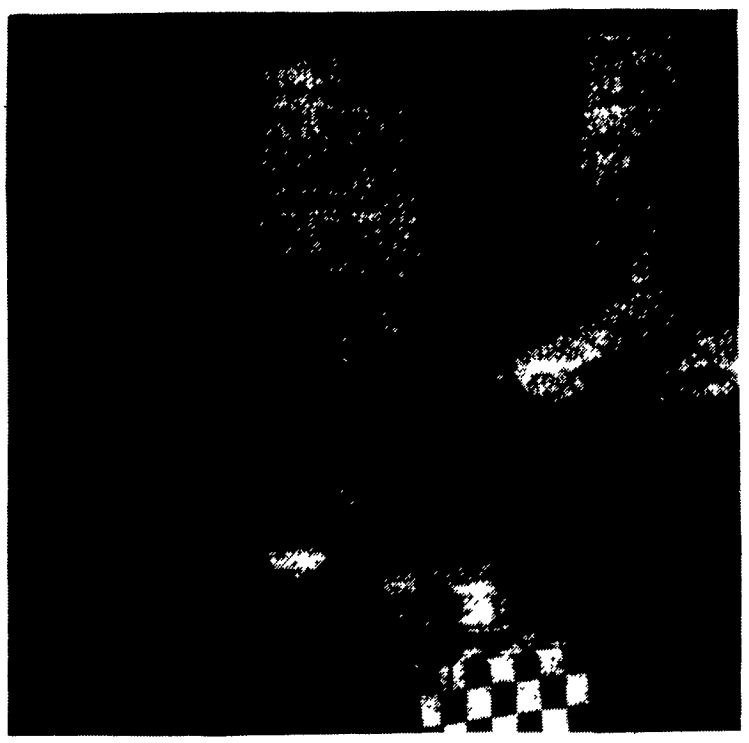
During a discussion of its development, Dr. Mark Hanigan, dairy research manager for Purina, said that work was done to develop the product in five steps.

The first step was with a study on "post-ruminal nutrient infusions," which basically means that a study was done with amino acids and dairy research animals to determine empirically what made a difference (would serve as a necessary complement) in small intestine absorption compared to protein digested in the rumen.

After discovering from that research that certain protein-based substances infused into the digestive system could make up for less total protein being pumped into the rumen, the next phase was developing the HiVAP material that would accomplish that bypass protein fete, and make feeding more efficient.

Digestibility studies were next developed as a third phase, and then early lactation studies were done, followed by actual field trials. Some of the field trials were done with Pennsylvania herds.

In other announcements, Purina officials said that the company has changed the manufacturing processes for its milk replacer.



Dick Poeppel hands two different milk replacer solutions to a seminar attendee to demonstrate mixibility differences.

Dick Poepple, marketing manager of the Purina dairy business group, in St. Louis, Mo., presented the new milk replacer to the dealers and demonstrated the improved mixibility and suspendibility of the product.

He also reminded dealers that they should make sure to instruct their customers to keep in mind the temperature of the stored milk replacer, and the temperature of the mixing vessel (bucket) when making up a batch of milk replacer to feed calves.

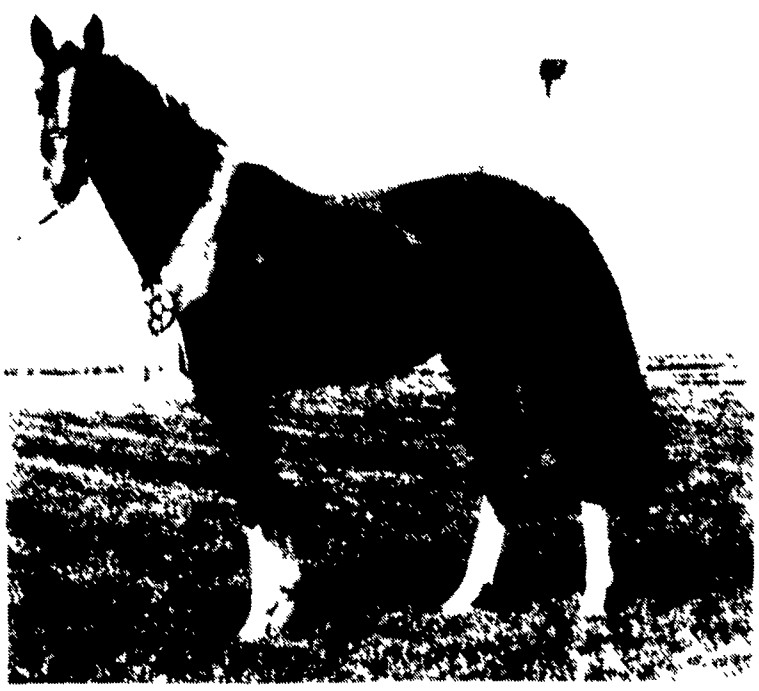
Filly Wins National Championship

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Foal's Paradise Farm, Lancaster County's new premiere horse breeding farm, concluded its first show season with one of the nation's highest honors for dressage horse breeders. M. Ecloir, the farm's two year old Dutch Warmblood filly, won the East Coast Breeders' Championship last week at Dressage at Devon, the country's most prestigious dressage horse breed show. Claire, as she is known by her stablemates, qualified for the championship by becoming Young Horse Champion at the Prince George's Equestrian Center in Maryland in August. She then competed at Devon against the Young Horse Champion and Reserve from six other nationally recognized breed shows, to win the East Coast Breeders Championship and take home top honors both in her suitability to perform as a dressage horse and to produce dressage horses.

Dressage is an equine discpline much like gymnastics for people, where the horse must perform highly athletic movements with grace, precision and harmony with its rider. Claire and her competitors were evaluated for their potential, suitability and qualities as dressage sport horses, with sixty percent of the scores based on athletiscim and movement, thirty percent on conformation, and ten percent on general impression.

Dressage at Devon was host to top international riders and horses, and boasted a first rate international judging team, including Liselotte Fore and Gotz Weber-Stephan from Germany, Mariette Whitages from Belgium, Domini Morgan from Great Britain, Elizabeth McMullen from Canada, and Dr. Barnabas Mandi from Hungary, all of whom regularly judge the best horses in the world. Dr. Mandi, also a medical doctor, has been a national horse show judge in Hungary since 1976 and an international dressage judge since 1989. Dr. Mandi, whose judging appearance at Dressage at Devon was his first visit to the United States, concluded the show very favorably impressed with the quality of the American horses he judged at Devon.



M. Ecloir, a Dutch Warmblood filly wins national honors.

We Take Customer Satisfaction Personally

Allan and Beth Rohrbach and their three children, Kelly, 7; Ben, 5, and Kurtis, 20 months love farm life on Lacey Acres. But the Rohrbachs often say that having Grandpa and Grandma nearby make farming and caring for the children so much easier.

The Secret Is Out — Grandparents Ease The Load

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHOEMAKERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Ask Allen and Beth Rohrbach how they manage milking morning and evening with three little children. Ask them how they find time to participate in church and community activities.

Both spouses reply in unison, "Our secret is that we have Grandma and Grandma nearby."

Grandpa and Grandma are Joan and Alton Rohrbach who own the 107-acre family farm in Shoemakersville where the two families farm together. The grandparents live in the farmhouse, but only a few yards away Allan, Beth and their children live in a newly-built spacious Cape Cod house.

The two families work together to crop farm about 200 acres with the land they rent.

Allen and Beth own 63 head of milking Holsteins with 56 replacements. The young couple do the milking, but Allan's dad does the feeding and his mom feeds the calves.

The grandparents also keep an eye on the children who run back and forth between the two homes. For the 5 a.m. milkings, the Rohrbachs rely on a monitor. When the children awaken, they often run out to the barn or to their grandparents. The children find plenty to play with in the barn and on occasion are even known to sleep in the feed troughs.

Allan, Beth, Kelly, Ben, and Kurtis talk with Allan's parents, Joan and Alton Rohrbach, who own the 107-acre farm and share farming and child care duties.

The cows are registered under the prefix, A Udder Delight, although the farm name is Lacey Acres. Allan explained that his parents kept the name, which the previous owner had derived from his own name.

After Allan and Beth married, they established their own herd on rented farms. About two years ago, they moved back to the family farm when Allan's younger brother switched his career to an agri-business.

A cow stanchion setup is used and the cows are put on pasture between feedings and milkings except during the winter months. For additional cow comfort, the Rohrbachs installed mats in the stalls last year.

The Rohrbachs grow all the grain used in the total mixed rations except for added protein.

Allan said that he has been hearing a lot about rotational grazing. "If the land is available and the weather is right, I think it can be a good thing. But I don't see myself doing it," he said.

Some of the acreage lies across the road, which he said would present a problem in moving the cows.

To illustrate how times have changed, Allan said that his dad recalled that an agricultural adviser had told him when he first purchased the farm to stop using the pasture and keep the cows in the barn to feed.

"Too many listen to armchair experts who never farm and don't even care to do so," Allan said of his skeptical attitude toward adapting to every new idea promoted.

But the Rohrbachs are committed to dairying and to promoting the industry.

The young couples' oldest daughter Kelly, 7, is the Berks County Little Miss.

It seems ever since Kelly was born three months premature, she was destined to become dairy princess.

Those first three months were touch and go as the 2 pound 6 ounce baby fought for her life. Her lung collapsed, she developed a heart murmur, she had bleeding on the brain, and required two blood transfusions.

At two months of age, Kelly was discharged from the hospital, but needed to be closely monitored for sleep apnea and other physical problems.

Although the parents had been warned of possible side effects of premature babies and the side effects of being hooked up to respirators, the feisty newborn soon developed into a bright, talkative little girl.

Although Kelly never was a big eater, she always drank her milk. Sometimes she'd go without eating for a week, but she always drank milk. To this day, Kelly likes milk fresh from the farm's milk tank instead of the store bought variety.

Her dad now says of his outgoing daughter, "When she had been hooked up to respirators, I used to say, 'If only we could hear her voice' — we couldn't even hear her cry because of the machines and tubes. "Now we can't stop her (from talking)."

Her talking ability no doubt influenced the judges at the Berks County Dairy Princess Pageant where five competed for the little Miss title.

For the pageant competition, Kelly prepared a poster of the animals on her farm and her parents filled out a questionaire on her interests. After Kelly told the audience about the animals on her farm, the master of ceremonies remarked that her questionnaire showed that she was a member of the cherub choir and asked her to sing impromptu. Kelly agreed by singing "Jesus Loves Me."

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Grandparents Ease The Load

Since being crowned dairy princess, Kelly makes guest appearances where she sings about milk. It's a song her mother composed.

Beth said, "We were told after she won the title that she should have a poem or song promoting milk. I couldn't find anything so I prayed about it, and the words and music just came to me." See the story about Kelly printed on Kid's Korner page B10, for the words.

Allan and Beth are Fleetwood Grange members. Allan is a member of Sire Power Berks-Lehigh Local, Agway Berks-Way advisory committee, and the PFB at the United Church of Christ where Beth leads the women's Bible study.

Last years the Rohrbachs took their first vacation in 5½ years. The two couples fill in for each other if one or the other needs to attend a meeting. Generally, neither couple takes too much time off because they believe working together makes farming enjoyable and manageable.

Seven-year-old Kelly Rohrbach is the Berks County Little Dairy Miss.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

We like to call our version Windows '96.

This adaptation in our life opens up new vistas, brightens our outlook, and puts us in intimate contact with the latest websites.

Actually, our windows upgrade is an annual one. (No, no, not to the computer). After months of snow and sleet pinging at teh glass, layers of dust from car, truck and equipment passing by on the road, traces of bird visits, assorted bug residue, all streaked with our frequent summer rains, our windows are in desparate need of seasonal improvement.

Preferred method of carrying out our windows upgrade is to tackle the task while the weather is still warm, before the houseplants have been shuttled in from the outside to the sills and while temperatures are pleasant enough not to freeze one's fingers during the installation.

One window was actually completed under those ideal conditions. And I optimistically figured that, if I could wash and switch screens in one window a day, the job would be wrapped up in no time.

But, that was not considering those frequent showers that prevented window washing. Or the need to run here or there to complete errands and attend meetings. Or weather that was just too cold and windy to allow comfort inside with the windows open while the layers of glass and screens were moved up and down for cleaning.

Still, one clean section of glass in contrast to the other dusty, dirty, cobwebbed, still-screened ones was really bugging me. So, when a recent, semi-balmy afternoon presented itself, the windows cleanup and installation went into high gear.

Biggest hurdle, next to the weather, is clearing the windowsills. Many modern homes, in my humble opinion, have a major flaw in that they no longer have windowsills. Where do people put stuff? On the other hand, maybe that's a mixed blessing. No windowsills, no collections to gather dust and house spiders.

So, off the windowsills come the African violets, the planters of greenery, the rooting cuttings of philodendron. Off come the collectible milk bottles, the cow-shaped cookie cutters, the cow candleholders, the cow-decorated planters — you get the idea.

That leads to the next layer, where might be found such interesting things as a lost pack of seeds, candle holders, the cat's favorite rubber ball, and an assortment of wire ornament hangers and hardware nuts stuck to a large magnet which never fails to intrigue visiting kids.

Once through all that, only one barrier remains between the cleaner and the cleanee windows. Those websites.

Spun by our super-industrious, domesticated spiders, these highly-engineered sites are constructed about August, when the spider population for some reason always seems to explode. They anchor together the upper window frames to the curtains and to the curtain rods, often reaching up toward the ceiling edges for extra coverage.

Spiders spin webs to catch bugs to eat for dinner, for energy to spin more webs to catch more bugs, ad infinitum. If there are no bugs, there will be no webs and spiders will seek their fortune elsewhere. Our abundant websites suggest more bugs in our house than I care to consider.

Each competition of a section of cleaned window, and the resulting clear outlook it provides upon the changing autumn scene outdoors, is a personal reward for undertaking this dreaded annual job. If the true fruits of labor are a sense of satisfaction and accomplishment, we window washers can bask and glow in the reflections shining off our newly-polished glass.

Until the next day. When it pours down raining.

Dairy Council Assembly Program Premieres In Harrisburg

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The curtain rose on The Marvelous Machine, a new school assembly program premiering at the Benjamin Franklin Elementary School in Harrisburg recently. This fun and educational theatrical production, sponsored by Dairy Council, was made possible by a matching grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Prior to today's performance of The Marvelous Machine, the grant will be presented to Dairy Council by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Earlier this eyar, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture awarded Dairy Council, Inc. (Southampton) a matching grant which will enable Dairy Council to offer assemblies at no cost to low-income schools. As a result of the grant, during the 1996-97 school year, 50 free programs will be presented to low-income schools throughout the state.

Dairy Council's school assembly program, The Marvelous Machine, targets elementary children with nutrition and health messages presented in a theatrical format. It also includes a lesson for teachers to integrate the program into their classrooms. As students have more access to computers, videos, and other multimedia such as CD ROM, learning and entertainment are often intertwined. Research has shown that assemblies are a popular and effective way to extend classroom learning by incorporating curriculum-related information into an entertaining format.

"Our partnership with the Department of Agriculture enables Dairy Council to bring this fun and educational school assembly to more children within the region," says Jan Stanton, executive director of Dairy Council.

Serving the Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware regions, Dairy Council, Inc. is a non-profit nutrition education organization funded by local dairy farmers. Dairy Council's programs for educators and health professionals promote consumer health and awareness through nutrition education.

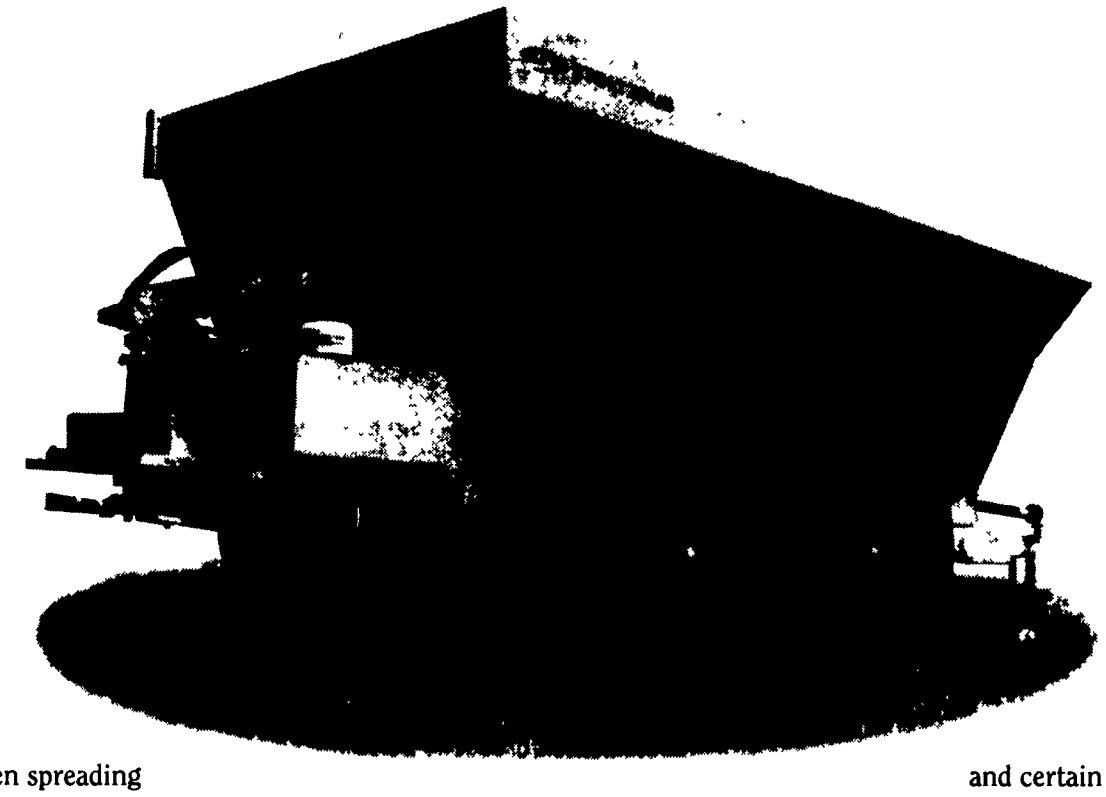
Sometimes You Need A Spreader Built Like A Tank.



When spreading and certain stockpiled lime, for example. The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus, for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading. We call that performance. You'll call it terrific.

We hope you compare a Stoltzfus WLS with other spreaders. It makes us look even better. Price? Sure we may be a little more. But when you end up replacing cheaper units in a few short years, what have you saved? Stoltzfus quality always pays foritself many times over.

Just how tough is a Stoltzfus WLS? Plenty tough. Call today. We'll tell you where to find the dealer nearest you, and send you free literature to inspect.

Chicks And Eggs Crack The Poultry Story

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) —The fall season is a busy one for the Lancaster County Poultry Association, which promotes the industry at fairs, schools, and special events throughout the county.

At the Carter and MacKae School, Lacaster, Poultry Ambassador Sherri Kreider and George Georges, president of the association, told the poultry story. Using slides, they showed how the chicks are incubated in a hatchery, transferred to chicken houses, and how the eggs are washed and inspected at a processing plant.

For the first time ever, the students had the opportunity to hold baby chicks.

"The purpose was to show the students the wholesomeness of eggs and poultry," Georges said.

That purpose was repeated at the Cherry Hill Apple Festival held recently. The annual event attracts thousands. The association handed out recipes, eggs, and food handling and safety tips to the crowd.

At the Cherry Hill Apple Orchard Festival, Steven, 7, and Victoria, 5, children of George Georges and Jean Georges, enjoy the petting zoo. The Lancaster County Poultry Association handed out eggs, poultry recipes, and food handling and safety tips to the crowd who gathered for the annual Lancaster County event held Sept. 21.

Pizza With Pizzazz

Americans are eating about 11 billion slices of pizza each year. Homestyle pizzas can be created with a variety of breads — English muffins, pizza shells, bagels or French bread. Topping choices are limited only by your imagination.

It is reported that as far back as the year 1000, picea, a baked piece of dough with herbs and spices, was eaten by the people of Naples, Italy.

Soon, people began to experiment. First with olive oil plus some garlic and salt. Later recipes used ricotta with sugar and spice, or mussels, ham, anchovies, and sardines.

The most famous experiment of all was by Raffaele Esposito, a pizza maker who received a royal summons to prepare a special pizza for the queen. To salute the colors of the Italian flag, he added white mozzarella to red tomato and green basil.

According to the Department of Agriculture statistics, the annual per capita pizza consumption is 23 pounds and Saturday night is the favorite pizza night.

Although traditional pizzas continue to gain in popularity, pizza is coming up with lots of different looks and tastes. In the past several years, vegetable pizza, fruit pizza, and ice cream pizza have become favorite party foods. These are made entirely different than the traditional pizza. Most of the recipes submitted from our readers are non-traditional.

Try these distinctive pizzas.

ANSWER — Sandra Burk, Linglestown, sends another whipped butter recipe for D.L. Beiler of New Holland.

Whipped Butter

Soften 4 sticks unwrapped butter to room temperature. Chill small mixing bowl and beaters. Put only one stick at a time into bowl and whip on high. While butter is whipping up fluffy, drizzle in slowly one tablespoon of ice water, dripping it in very slowly.

As the butter whips, it keeps getting paler in color, and the volume rises in the bowl. Add the next stick and another tablespoon of ice water, until the full pound of butter has been whipped with 4 tablespoons of ice water.

This same principle applies if you want the flavor to be added to the butter, such as honey, raspberry puree, or maple syrup instead of ice water.

The butter spreads easily and goes further because the volume in nearly doubled from whipping. Other interesting flavors to use on hard rolls or veggies are onion or garlic. Alter the amounts with these to control strength of the flavor.

Be Careful Not To Miss The Scenery

As a young man, Eddie Cantor was in a hurry to hit the top. "Don't go so fast, son," his grandmother cautioned, "or you'll miss the scenery." He raced on. The final curtain came down one night after an obvious hit. Backstage, a telegram arrived from the actor's wife, Ida. Their fourth daughter had been born. His grandmother's words echoed in his mind, "...you'll miss the scenery."

What can fathers learn from this example of Eddie's early race for success in his career? For one thing, it should cause each father to pause and reflect on how he views his role in parenting. Now more than ever, fathers are being acknowledged as important contributors in the upbringing of their children. Children's positive self-esteem, healthy sex-role identity, and higher school achievement are all linked to fathers who are involved, supporitve, and who spend time with their children. It is good for fathers too. Just as many women suffer from being viewed only as homemakers, fathers often suffer from being seen only as the breadwinners of the family.

So how do busy fathers today keep from "missing the scenery?" I spoke with fellow co-worker Chet Hughes, livestock agent for Lancaster County Cooperative Extension and a devoted father of two children ages 8 and 10.

"Security is important for kids," Chet explained. "Recently, I had to leave for a week-long trip to Nashville for my work and my eight-year-old son Andy was upset. I found it important to let him know that I would call him every day from Nashville so that he knew I was still thinking of him. I also made sure to buy a little gift for him from my trip."

Surprisingly, Chet found a simple gesture when he returned home to be the most appreciated. "More than anything else, Andy wanted to take a ride in the rental car that I had driven on my trip. He got the biggest kick out of going for a short ride with me when I returned."

Indeed, it may be these "little gestures" that mean the most to children. Fathers have many opportunities for expressing their support in small ways. Whether it's attending school functions, taking time to throw a baseball in the backyard, or taking a child along to work on occasion.

Chet is fortunate to have an occupation in which his children can become involved. Ten-year-old daughter Allison now shows 4-H livestock animals at county fairs headed up by her father, and the whole family has enjoyed trips and other activities associated with Chet's job.

One thing Chet tries to do more than anything is to be sensitive to his children's needs and interests.

He explained,"Sometimes we try to squeeze too many activities into the day. We may rush to see a Friday night movie when my children would really be happiest just spending the evening together relaxing as a family in the living room."

This is a reassuring point for many fathers who feel that time spent with their children must include grand plans for fun and entertainment. In fact, what children value most from fathers is their time and involvement in activities as simple as doing homework together, cleaning the garage, sharing hobbies, running errands together, or simply engaging in good old backyard "horseplay."

Another important activity that is a priority for Chet and his family is shared dinnertime. He explained, "Sometimes I'm late getting home from work, but we always try to eat dinner together every night. That's important so we have time together, especially when I have meetings at night that take me away from my family."

Indeed, dinnertime provides a wonderful opportunity for busy fathers to "reconnect" with their spouse and children after a busy day.

Like any good father, Chet Hughes realizes that if he is going to have the influence that he wants to have with his children, it is going to take an investment of his time in their daily activities.

For Eddie Cantor, the "moment of truth" came at that very moment that he received his wife's telegram announcing the birth of his daughter. He recalled, "Oh, how much I had missed. Ever since that moment, I've made it a point to pause now and again to enjoy the scenery. Those pauses have become more important than any full schedule I've ever had!"

Kids Korner

With a tiara on her head, Kelly tells her brother Ben, 5, about the poster she prepared for the pageant where she competed with five other girls for the Little Miss title in Berks County.

Every day Kelly gathers eggs from the chickens on the farm.

Life As Little Dairy Miss

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHOEMAKERSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Seven-year-old Kelly Rohrbach likes to sing. A song that she is singing a lot lately is one that her mother made up for Kelly's job as the Berks County Little Dairy Miss.

In that position, Kelly assists Berks County Dairy Princess Angela Werley, also named the state dairy princess, in encouraging people to drink more milk and eat more dairy products. Kelly hands out cow erasers and milk stickers to children, and sings her song at special functions that she attends. The words go like this:

Moo've over Coca Cola
Moo've over 7-Up
There's something in the market
That's better in a cup.

Moo've over gourmet coffee
Moo've over ice tea.
It's higher in calcium
And better for me.

Get moo'ving for nutrition
Get moo'ving for health.
Dairy products are the drink
So why not treat yourself?

Kelly practices what she preaches. She loves milk. She'd rather drink milk than eat.

She has a cow named Minnie and a calf named Missy after her cousins.

She rides a horse named Joker and likes to swing and climb trees.

But her favorite past time is playing with a chicken named Ashley. The 6-year-old chicken is plump and black speckled.

"I like to dress her in clothes and put make-up on her," Kelly said."

She added that her chicken also has arthritis and only two toes.

Her chicken must think it is a cat because she likes to eat cat food and drink milk.

Kelly is in first grade at Perry Elementary School. Every morning Kelly walks out the long farm lane to the school bus stop. Her cat Britches follows her.

"If I'm ahead of him, he cries until he catches up," Kelly said.

When Kelly returns home from school she plays with her brothers, Ben, 5, and Kurtis, 20 months. The children have two large corn bins in which they play house. Soon the bins will be filled with corn and then they will need to find another place to play house.

Because the children's grandparents live next door, Kelly, Ben, and Kurtis often there, especially while their parents milk the cows on their farm. Kelly especially likes to play games such as checkers and I Spy with her grandparents.

Kelly was involved in dance and acrobats until she was named the Little Dairy Miss and became too busy.

While promoting milk, Kelly sometimes meets the Milk Thing — that big furry creature that advertises milk on television.

"I love The Milk Thing," Kelly said. "One time we were having a cow milking contest at a baseball game. The cow kicked over the other team's bucket of milk. Then The Milk Thing came over and dumped our bucket of milk even though I told him not to do that."

Kelly's team lost the cow milking contest, but later The Milk Thing made Kelly happy again. The Milk Thing caught the baseball and gave it to Kelly. She gave him a milk eraser and stuck a "I love milk sticker" on his back.

If you are ever in Berks County, you might see Kelly promoting milk at a supermarket, mall or special function. If you do, she will gladly give you an eraser and sticker.

In the meantime, follow Kelly's advice and always drink your milk.

Kelly, Ben, and Kurtis form their own band during play time.

When it is empty, this corn bin makes an excellent playhouse for Kelly, but it will soon be filled with corn.

A Walk In The Fall

Fall is a good time for a family walk. The foliage will be at its best the next couple of weeks. The colors on the trees will range from russets to bright yellows with many hues in between. The field and lawn grasses are getting ready for winter. It's the time of year when schedules change — the gardens are harvested, the canning completed, the days are getting shorter and the temperature means sweaters or jackets. It's a good time for a quiet relective walk.

Before you leave on your walk remember take along baskets or bags to collect interesting things. For small children take a piece of masking tape and make a bracelet with the sticky side out and they can place their items on the tape and have a reayd made nature bracelet. If you live where you can walk in the woods or fields you can gather dried weeds, milkweed pods, thistles, Queen Anne's lace, pieces of bark and many other interesting items can be found along the way. Even in the city you can find differently shaped leaves, acorns, seeds, and many naturally dried flowers. Of course, you always want to be on the lookhout for possible hazards such as poison ivy, hidden rocks and stumps.

Look for signs of animals getting ready for winter. Do you see squirrels gathering nuts for the winter? Can you find any insect cocoons? Can you see or hear geese flying south for the cold winter months?

Look for seeds. See how they find ways to grow next year. Which fly through the air? Which are carried by animals or people? Which fall to the ground or are buried by animals? Try bringing some of each kind home.

After returning from your walk take time to look at the treasures you have collected. Try some of the following activities using the items you have chosen on your fall walk. Make a dried arrangement; do crayon leaf rubbings; laminate the leaves between wax paper; make a collage; or try making a mosaic using seeds or seed pods. Everyone can make their own cration or you can work together and create a family exhibit.

While working on your creations be sure to talk about your walk. Ask questions such as "Do you remember where we found the dense green moss? What were the squirrels doing with the acorns?" and etc. Questions help us remember many things and help children learn many things we take for granted. When we ask questions we are helping children learn. If a child asks a question and you don't know the answer be sure to say you don't know, but together you can find the answer at your local library, extension office or school.

Finally, take a minute to reflect about your walk. What did you see? Was it a silent walk or was there a lot of talking? Did you see any animals? What senses did you use? Did you enjoy collecting items on your walk? So many times we are so busy that we just move from one thing to the next. By taking a few minutes to think about what we have done helps us reflect and appreciate simple things in life. Enjoy your walk.

Book Review

The American Family Farm, by Hans Halberstadt. The story of the American family farm is told with gorgeous color photography and an incredible selection of archival shots.

This book uses a seasonal theme to describe how the family farm functioned in the first half of the century, and compares it to the modern farm. A variety of types of farms (dairy, beef, grain, fruit, etc.) are examined from around the country, as well as a selection of photos and text describing Amish farms.

Sidebars contain seasonal recipes and "to do" lists as well as concise histories of farm equipment.

The photography is especially remarkable, with the usual great photos from the author supplanted with archival photos from Walker Evans and color aerial photos from Bill Garnet.

The book is hardbound with 192 pages in 10" x 10" format. Illustrations include 130 black and white and 80 color photographs. Motorbooks International is the publisher and the price is $29.95. For more information, readers may call their 800 number: 1-800-826-6600.

Cedar Crest FFA Participates At The All-American

The Cedar Crest FFA recently participated at the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show.

Members worked as tour guides for elementary students in the Harrisburg area. Members who served as tour guides were as follows: Mindy Hostetter, Dave Gill, Jason Balsbaugh, Jannelle Wartluft, Erica Bechtel, Angela Stoner, Kendra Reist, and Sean Weaver.

They told the kids about different breeds of cattle, such as Holsteins, Jerseys, Brown Swiss, and Ayrshires. The tour guides also informed the children about the different feeds fed to the cows, such as soybean, haylage, corn silage, hay and ryelage. They also showed the preschoolers how a cow is milked.

At the end of the tour, the kids were treated to a glass of milk. They also got to meet Pinky the pink cow. After the tour, the students realized that the milk they drink was not made at the store — that it really came from a cow.

In addition to members serving as tour guides, Alisha Myers, Melinda Bomgardner, and Amanda Martin participated in the dairy judging team competition. They competed against 23 teams from across Pennsylvania. The team got second.

The following people placed as individual judges: Alisha Myers 1st, Melinda Bomgardner 6th, Kendra Reist 31st, Amanda Martin 85th, and Dave Gill 97th. The placings are out of 295 contestants. Other Cedar Crest participants in the dairy judging were as follows: Mike Ruhl, Dan Kreider, Korin Keller, Raacheal Krall, Troy Gettler, and Jason Shirk.

Members who helped out midweek at the Manheim FFA pizza stand were Neil Wenger, Corey Shelley, Kelly Moore, Tammy Hartranft, and Cheryl Beisley.

As Fair Season Ends, FFA Fund Raisers Begin

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — For Lancaster County FFA'ers, it's the end of one season and the beginning of another.

It's the end of fair showing season, but the fund-raising season is well under way.

For Manheim Central FFA members, if they weren't helping pitching up tents for various show enterprises at the recent Manheim Community Farm Show, they were pitching in and helping at the chapter's pizza stand all through the farm show.

FFA member Neil Wenger said the pizza sale fundraiser raises money for "chapter supplies, trips to Kansas City, and other activities."

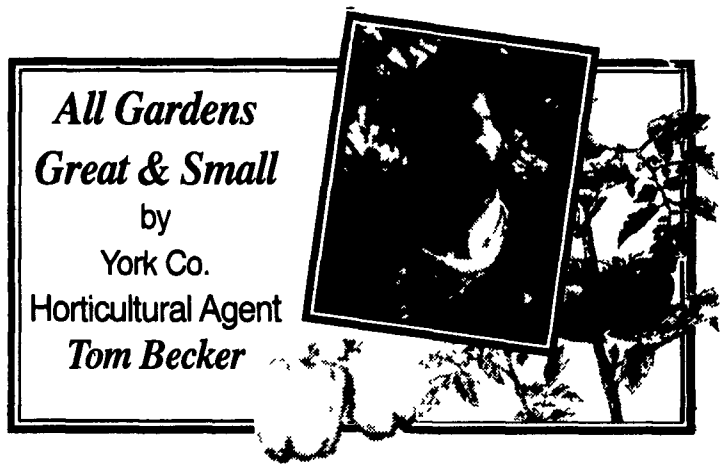
The beginning of the farm show was a lucrative one for the fundraiser, at which club members sold 83 pizzas for a total of $846 in sales. Tuesday night, because of lots of rain, was nearly a washout — only eight whole pizzas sold. Wednesday's sales picked up again, one of the better nights of the fair. Sales continued Thursday into Friday evening.

Wenger said he enjoys being with friends and raising money for the chapter. "We even get free pizza, depending on how long you work at the stand," he said. But he enjoys meeting people and answering some of the fairgoers questions, such as where is the cheesesteak stand, or the french fry stand?

The most unusual question Neil heard:

"Where are the tractor pulls?" he said.

Members who helped out midweek at the FFA stand were Neil Wenger, Corey Shelley, Kelly Moore, Tammy Hartranft, and Cheryl Beisley.



Windrow Composting In The Garden

Fall brings the great and small gardener outside to rake leaves and do one last mowing. Put excess organic material to good use in a compose pile.

Materials that can be used include: shredded leaves, hay, straw, lawn clippings, sawdust, manure, cornstalks, disease free vegetables and flower garden wastes, kitchen scraps and even well soaked newspapers. Avoid kitchen scraps with meat or grease to keep animals from digging.

A windrow compost pile can be built without the aid of a bin(s). Begin by raking up leaves, grass and garden refuse in a long, narrow pile. Choose a location in an unused garden area. Moisten the pile after adding each layer of fresh organic materials. In addition, add a layer of soil or sprinkle with fertilizer act as compost starter...

Continue layering your pile until it's approximately 4-6' high, 4-6' in width and 9-10' or longer in length. The top of the pile should be saucer shaped to allow water to collect. Keep adding water to wet all leaf surfaces. This is especially true if the leaves were not shredded prior to composting.

For gardeners wanting to be 'active' with their compostpile, turn the pile at least once next spring. Turn the windrow by rolling the pile lengthwise mixing the outer with inner parts of the pile. This allows for equal decay of all types of materials. The pile should feel warm to the touch several days after turning. If it does not, it possibly needs more moisture or more nitrogen added as 'green' materials like grass or manure.

As you turn the pile, be sure to dampen each layer of organic matter and soil. A commercial fertilizer such as 10-20-10, 10-10-10, or 10-6-4 can be spread at the rate of ½ pound or 1 cupful to each 10 square feet. Ground limestones can be spread on the pile at the same rate. The decaying process works more rapidly when air temperatures are warm and the materials are small in size. Compost should be ready to spread by early next spring.

The end result, a dark humus-like material, will be a welcome addition to next year's gardens and flower beds.

Here's a few more compost mixing rule's of thumb.

- Think like a cook. Use 1 part green to 3 parts brown material. Layer greens and browns to make a lasagna compst or mix greens and browns as you add them to the pile to make a chili-style compost.
- Mowing rather than raking leaves into a bagger attachment makes an excellent ready-to-make compost or mulch. Do not use coarse material, small branches, corn stalks, etc. without shredding or chopping into ½ " size morsels.
- Use a compose thermometer to monitor the temperature. After the pile reaches its highest temperature 120-160°F, mix the pile after the temperature drops below 100°F.
- By turning a pile several times, compost is often ready in 3 to 4 months. With turning bins, 4 weeks is not unusual.

Novice Shows Supreme Champion At Manheim

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — A new face in sheep competition at the Manheim Community Farm Show stole the limelight with his lamb Nevada, which took the supreme champion title over the market, breeding, and sale lambs.

Ten-year-old Kenton Bucher, the happy owner of the sheep purchased locally from Jay Brachbill, expressed shocked upon winning the honor.

After the capon market dropped, Kenton and his brothers decided to raise sheep through the urging of their father Kenneth.

"We thought the project might be something to make a little money," the father said.

The money garnered from selling a supreme champion at the end of the farm show was significantly higher than average lambs that go on the auction block.

Judge Billy MacCauley said the lightweight lamb has more meat pound for pound and is most ideally finished of all the 120 sheep exhibited.

That ideal finish, no doubt, came from Nevada's obstinate behavior. The lamb had a reputation for escaping from its pen and was difficult to manage. Kenton and his brothers chased it around the Bucher's one-acre plot in Mastersonville, led it, and rode it like a Brahma bull in an effort to tame it.

At the show, the lamb had little of the classy pizzazz that a champion normally exhibits. According to the judge, that was due to the amateurism shearing job and the exhibitor's lack of experience in setting up the lamb. But the lamb's ideal finish carried it through for the judge who said that he basis his decision on what a lamb will look like on rail.

Joelynn Donough's heavyweight sale lamb was named the reserve champion sale lamb and the reserve supreme champion. Although it's also the first year in sheep showing for 9-year-old Joelynn, she comes from a family who have long been involved in raising champion sheep. Her confident showmanship abilities won her a first place in her age division at the Manheim Show, just like those she garnered in several other shows in the county this season.

Joelynn's reserve supreme champion was homebred and her favorite.

"I'm going to cry when I sell him. He's so mushy," Joelynn said.

Joelynn's brother Travis showed the grand champion market lamb, which was also the lightweight champion. Another brother Ryan showed the reserve lightweight and the reserve heavyweight champions.

The final round of competition resulted in all three in the show ring. Joelynn was delighted to win over her brothers.

Amy Bollinger showed the reserve grand champion market lamb, which was also the heavyweight champion.

The judge said that he considers Lancaster County one of the hardest places to judge sheep contests because the kids are so uniform in showing from having been taught well.

The judge mentioned that he prefers to see exhibitors with both hands on the sheep at all times and for this reason selected Sara Strickler in the senior division and Michael Musser in the intermediate division.

In breeding sheep competition, Jessica Stoltzfus took both champion and reserve titles with her Dorset ewes named Jeanae and Brittany.

Generally, Brittany places above Jeanae, but Jessica considers the two almost identical. The judge selected Jeanae because she was straighter in the hock.

MacCauley said that it's always difficult to select a breed champion because of the different breed characteristics, but he selected the Dorsets as champions because they are most structurally sound and could go on to much higher levels of competition.

"I just got back from KILE and had no time to wash them," said 16-year-old Jessica, who is known to pamper her sheep. Jessica is the daughter of Frank and Irene Stoltzfus of Elizabethtown.

In the Cheviot breed, Keith Bollinger showed the champion, and Katye Allen the reserve. In the Hampshire breed, Regina Landis showed the champion and Jimmy Zimmerman the reserve. Jimmy also had both champion and reserve in the Southdown breed.

The Montadale breed resulted in Jessica Schmidt taking the champion trophy and her brother John the reserve.

Other breed champions included Amy Haines showing both champion and reserve in the Columbia breed. Radell Peters showed both champion and reserve in the Jacobs breed. Amy Bollinger showed both champion and reserve in the Shropshire breed.

A partial listing of the results of the Manheim sheep show follows:

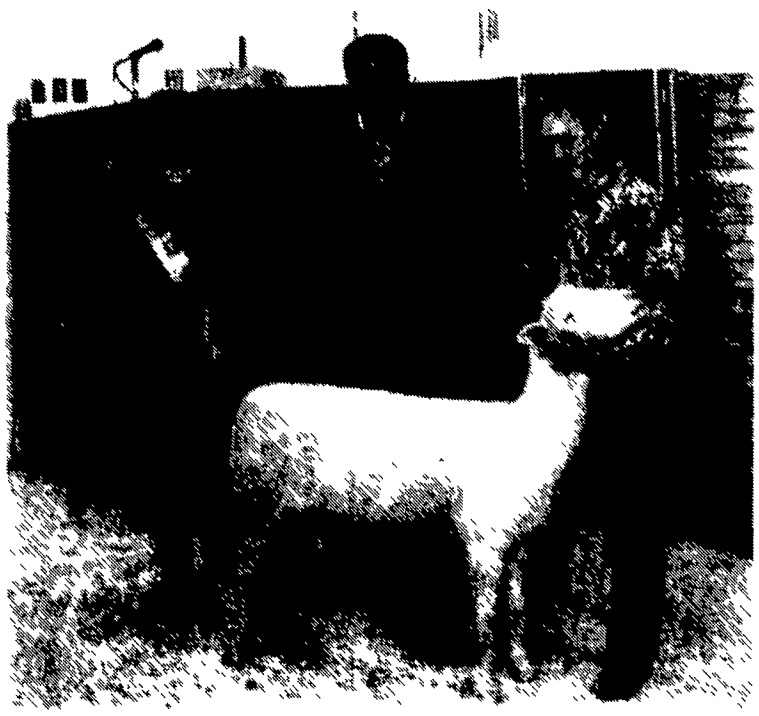
From 45 contestants, these three won showmanship championships in their respective age division. From left, Michael Musser, 11-13 years; Sara Strickler, 14-years and over; and Joelynn, 10-years and under.



In breeding sheep competition at Manheim, Jessica Stoltzfus shows a Dorset that was named champion over all breeding sheep. She also had the reserve champion breeding sheep. Farm Show Queen Pam Lehman holds the banner while Billy MacCauley looks on.

Market lamb competition at Manheim ended with Travis Donough showing the champion and Amy Bollinger the reserve champion.

Manheim Farm Show Wraps Up Lancaster County Fair Season

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — For the 43rd year, Manheim Community Farm Show wrapped up a successful fair season for Lancaster County.

From Oct.7-11, the final fair of the county featured special attractions and competitions. Unlike some local fairs, Manheim prides itself in being a genuine agricultural fair.

Food stand holders must be locally based and funds raised for non-profit organizations.

Exhibitors brought their best animals, produce, baked and canned goods, arts, crafts, and sewing projects for others to view. The exhibits are considered educational and inspires creativity among viewers.

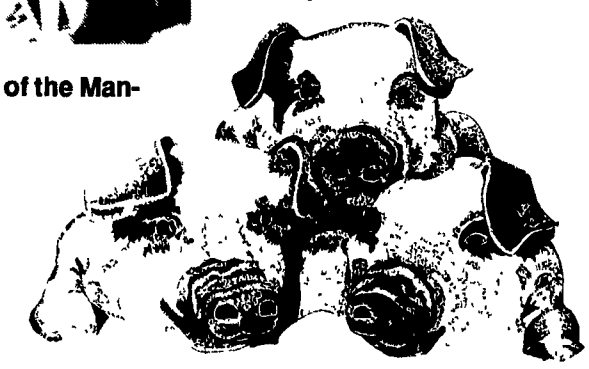
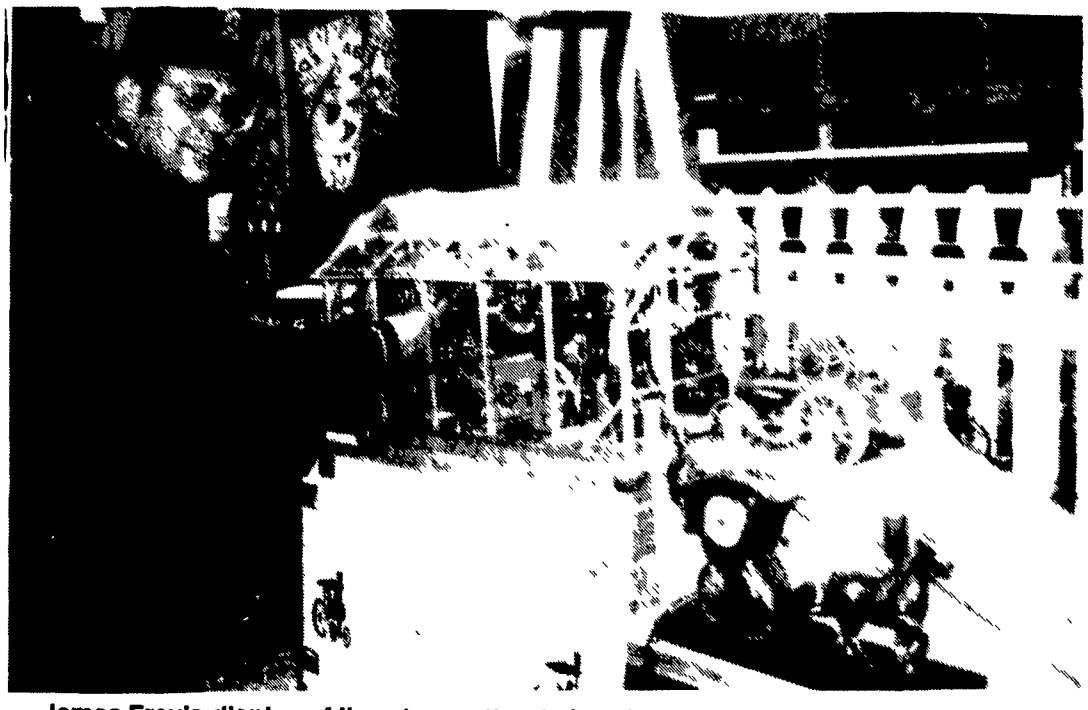
At the Manheim Lead Line, Sarah Zurin attracted attention with this black and white sheep although she was not a top winner.



There is more than one way for pigs to be exhibited at the Manheim Community Farm Show. A large drawing of this picture by Jamie Ober, senior at Manheim Central High School, appeared in the art competition.

At the Manheim Community Farm Show, the Cassel sisters, from left, Melissa, Amy, and Karen keep participating in swine, sheep, and steer competitions. Now the youngest daughter of Marlin and Nancy Cassel are grooming their youngest daughter 13-month-old Chelsey for future competitions. The Cassels calculated that if she enters 4-H and FFA competitions like their older daughters, the family will have been involved in showing for 35 years.



James Frey's display of live steam attracts hundreds at the Manheim Farm Show. The live steam rollers are run on the combustion of fire and water. James builds the barns and ramps and puts together kits of the many different steam engines.

Manheim Farm Show

Dressed as Little Bo Peep, Bobbi Bentzel and her lamb Basheba wore matching shepherdess hats.

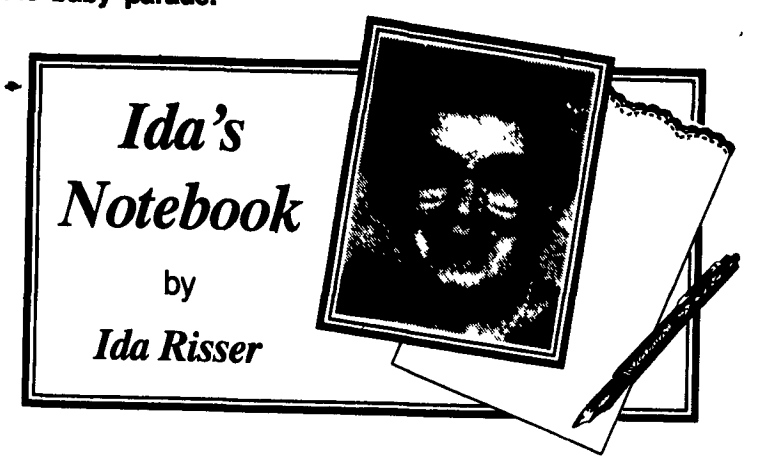
The Manheim Farm Show told the Tale of Peter Rabbit in the baby parade.



For so many days I have listened to the whine of the harvester, as it cuts the corn for the silo, that now I think that I hear it when I don't. Sometimes it was in nearby fields and other times far away in a distant field.

Sounds can be pleasant and soothing or otherwise. Most of my life has been spent sleeping beside a tin roof on a porch. It is a soothing sound to hear rain when you are snug in a warm bed. If a child is lost, then even their cry can be reassuring.

As a youngster hunting wild raspberries on a summer day, I and my sister were scared by an unusual sound. We were far from home when a thunderstorm broke. We ran to a porch on a summer cottage and decided to wait till the wind and rain were over. Then we heard a loud crashing sound and another, and another. What we did not realize at the time was that a large brick walnut tree above the cottage was dropping nuts on the tin roof. It certainly startled us at the time.

Sometimes the sound of the phone ringing in the middle of the night awakens us to good or bad news or simply a wrong number. I remember one call telling us that we had a new grandchild while another announced an unexpected death in the family.

There are big sounds and little sounds but one of the pleasant ones is the birds singing in the trees. And another even better is the chatter and laughter of little children. We don't seem to appreciate the joys that our hearing brings us until it is gone.

Farmland Protection Program Receives Federal Funds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius announced that Pennsylvania's farmland protection program will get $1 million in funding from the 1996 federal Farm Bill.

A cooperative agreement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service was signed recently, with $1 million allocated to the state and $600,000 more going to Adams, Bucks, Chester, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York counties.

The funds were made available through the Farmland Preservation program in the bill and were available to states with existing programs. Pennsylvania received the second highest amount, following California, which received $1.9 million.

In making the announcement at a regular meeting of the state Agricultural Land Preservation Board, Brosius said, "We are delighted that Pennsylvania has received these funds which will greatly enhance our program by allowing us to purchase additional agricultural conservation easements."

The first three farms to receive partial federal funding were approved at the meeting. Properties approved are:

• Chester — Calvin R. and Donna S. Blank, West Fallowfield Township, 99 acres, $215,516.

• Mifflin — David R. and Vicki R. Steward, Wayne Township, 174 acres, $95,650.

• Northampton — Budd E. and Thelma M. Ott, Upper Mt. Bethel Township, 360 acres, $760,737.

In addition, 12 farms were approved for state funding. Those farms include:

• Berks — Roland C. and Carolyn M. Feeg, Marion and Heidelberger Township, 202 acres, $404,400.

• Carbon — Clair and Margaret George, Towamensing Township, 130 acres, $179,200.

• Chester — Walker Farm, East Marlborough Township, 134 acres, $450,000.

• Erie — Jeffrey and Patti Southwick, Lynne Southwick Turner, North East Township, 130 acres, $250,502.

• Lancaster — David and Donna Spangler, Fulton Township, 182 acres, $188,773.

• Lycoming — Dale and Sharon Cooley, Washington Township, 91 acres, $77,805.

• Lycoming — Ned Farley Farm, Washington Township, 111 acres, $100,350.

• Lycoming — Farnsworth Farms, Inc., Jordan Township, 116 acres, $108,730.

• Montgomery — John G. Lutz Farm II, Douglass Township, 50 acres, $225,000.

• Snyder — Monte and Carol Miller, Middlecreek Township, 171 acres, $111,501.

• York, Richard D. and Rodger D. Good (Twin Good Farm), Lower Chanceford and Chanceford Townships, 351 acres, $385,235.

To date, 660 farms in 33 counties have been approved for preservation. They total 82,614 acres.

Farm Bureau Names Friends of Agriculture

ALBANY, N.Y. — Ten members of the New York Congressional Delegation were named recipients of Farm Bureau's Friends of Agriculture Award for their support of agriculture in votes taken in the last two years.

The award winners were Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, Rep. Dan Frisa, Rep. Amo Houghton, Rep. Peter King, Rep. John McHugh, Rep. Susan Molinari, Rep. Bill Paxon, Rep. Jack Quinn, Rep. Gerald Solomon, and Rep. James Walsh.

According to NYFB President John Lincoln, "New York Farm Bureau is pleased to honor these 10 lawmakers for their commitment to agriculture where it counts — in Congress when the votes are taken. Though farmers make up a tiny percentage of this country's population, we applaud these individuals for recognizing the great importance of agriculture in the economy and the environment."

Friends of Agriculture is an awards program of the American Farm Bureau Federation, with awards to congressional representatives and senators presented by county and state Farm Bureaus.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questons but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-adressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

QUESTION — Yvonne Musser, Lancaster, writes that she is planning a trip to see fall foliage and visit family cementaries in the Smithsburg, Md. area. She would like to plan the trip so that she can eat at one of the ham and oyster suppers she heard are served in the area. She would like date, location, time and information on the ham and oyster suppers.

QUESTION — Mrs. Riehl, Narvon, would like to buy crocks. She needs a large size used for making sauerkraut.

QUESTON — J. Robert Musser, Lancaster, is restoring a home built in 1813 and needs some hand cut nails in various sizes to attach to hardware corner cupboards and to secure some wood work. His wife read an article some years ago about a company, she thinks was in the New England states, that gave a history of the nails. Does any one know of this company or another source?

THE MAYTOWN BEETLE

C. W. Pitts, Ph.D.
Professor of Entomology

Approximately one year ago John Schwartz, Lancaster County extension director, and I were visiting a layer house in Maytown.

I was digging around in the manure and I noticed something different. After closer examination I realized that I was looking at a type beetle I had never seen. We laughingly called it the "Maytown Beetle."

After inspecting the whole house and looking at the distribution of this insect throughout the house, it became apparent that this was something new that should be pursued. We did not have anything with us to collect these beetles, so the next day John Schwartz got some buckets and collected five five-gallon buckets of manure.

We brought these buckets back to Penn State, where we sorted out 59 adult beetles. With these adult beetles we started a colony and tried to determine what the immature stages looked like.

We went to the Frost Entomological Museum and identified the beetle we had collected. It was called Necrobia Rufipes, the red-legged ham beetle. It had been reported in chicken houses in England in the 1900s and we also found several other studies in the literature.

We immediately started several experiments in the laboratory. First, we started trying to breed this beetle because we thought it may be a potential predator to add to our menu of control tactics. We were successful.

Feeding experiments were initiated to see if Necrobia had the potential to be a good fly predator. We compared it with our best known predator, Carcinops Pumilo, to determine how well they compared as predators. Through our laboratory work, it turns out that Necrobia is as good or better than Carcinops as a predator.

We were then interested in discovering if we released reared insects into the layer houses, would they stay in the chicken house, become established, and become good predators?

We have expanded our colony of beetles to approximately 30,000. The next step is to release a large number of beetles into a high-rise layer house and determine their effectiveness as fly predators that can be used throughout Pennsylvania.

We were just informed that we were awarded a small grant to do a release study of Necrobia in a Pennsylvania poultry house. We expect to have results available after the first of the year that will direct our future research with the beetle.

If you want more details about our work, please contact Charlie Pitts at (814) 863-7789.

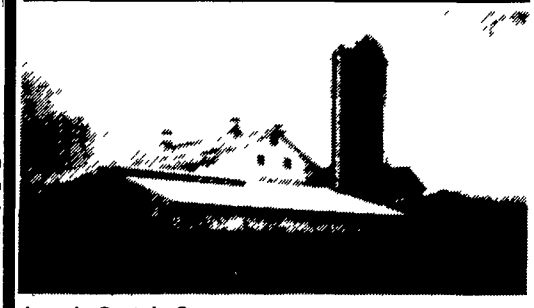
LAPP'S BARN EQUIPMENT

CURTAIN SYSTEMS



Lapp's Curtain System

Lapp's insulated curtains can help you make your farm more efficient. You can save up to 30% on your fuel/energy costs while maintaining a comfortable climate enables livestock to feed into live weight more efficiently, the curtain makes your barn warmer in winter and cooler in summer

Our curtains are available in both 4 and 6 ply, both of which are faced with a impervious white vinyl layer which faces the elements. With all these benefits, the average payback is two years!

A lower cost alternative to the insulated curtains, are Lapp's single layer curtains. You still get all the benefits of using a high quality curtain to keep the elements outside and being able to lower the curtain to naturally ventilate in your barn.

You Rise Up Early When You Live On A Farm.
The Chores are all waiting as you enter the barn.
Soon you will leave and go into the house, your breakfast is waiting, made by your spouse.
Now before you go out, I have something to say.
I was cleaning upstairs, the other day. Some won't go up, others just fall down, you can feel the cold air blowing all around. Look at these windows, how easy to clean, a house full of these would fulfill my dream. Why don't we call them, they look so nice there is no charge for giving a price.
That's Right, Call Sensenig Today.

Economist: Chinese Ag Trade Not A Sure Thing

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Midwestern farmers shouldn't bet their mortgages that China will become a big buyer of U.S. farm products, at least not quite yet, said an Ohio State University agricultural economist.

According to Allan Lines, China's leaders intend for that country to become self-sufficient in food production, rather than become a long-term player in international markets. China's leaders consider its recent purchases of U.S. grains to be a temporary phase to meet short-term shortages, he said.

However, China's road to self-sufficiency could result in considerable environmental damage if marginal lands are brought into production, Lines said. He thinks China would be better off relying on the world's grain markets, rather than trying to expand crops into fragile ecosystems.

"Farmers should be cautious and wary," Lines said. "Take advantage of short-term opportunities, but be careful about making strategic plans based on the idea that the U.S. will become the breadbasket for China."

Lines came to those conclusions after a visit this summer to the world's most populous nation. The Chinese Academy of Sciences invited a team of seven OSU researchers to study China's prospects for sustainable agricultural growth. The team logged 1,500 miles visiting rural areas and consulted with Chinese scholars.

The trip opened Line's eyes to China's great strides in improving agricultural production since the Communist-ruled government abandoned collectivization more than 15 years ago. However, farmers have probably maximized their output from the existing land base, Lines said.

For example, additional applications of synthetic fertilizers would not increase yields that much, Lines said. Since 1981, farmers have at least doubled nitrogen and phosphorous use, and have nearly tripled potash use, according to the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization, as cited by Lines.

Farmers have also maximized use of subsurface, ground water and impoundment sources for irrigation, Lines said. China's growing industrial and consumer sectors are also pressuring water resources, he said.

As a result, China is looking to expand crop production to high, cool, drier areas, such as the Tibetan Plateau, Inner Mongoloian Plateau and Manchurian valleys, Lines said. China would have to impound surface waters to develop massive irrigation systems to water these areas, he said.

"If you start putting a plow to these extensive grasslands, you create wind erosion and soil erosion problems," Lines said.

China's food needs are being driven by an expanding economy that is putting more money in the hands of consumers, Lines said. Consumers are using their higher incomes to buy more meat, which is putting pressure on feedgrains production.

"As their income increases, they want to eat better, so they change their diet," Lines said. "They want to eat more and use more edible oils."

Lines recommended that China integrate its food production system and internal food demand with the world markets. That would mean business for the world's farmers who crop less fragile environments, such as the Midwest.

However, Midwestern farmers wouldn't necessarily reap a windfall, Lines said. Competitors include grain farmers in Central and Eastern Europe, South American, Australia and Africa, he said.

Nevertheless, the United States' new farm policy puts Midwestern farmers in good shape to respond to any changes in the world markets, Lines said. Looming in the balance is what China will do if its food demand outstrips its ability to produce.

"It's very difficult to say what is going to happen in China," Lines said. "You have to realize it's a centrally planned, Communist state that is reluctant to turn loose and let the market economy grow as fast as it will grow."

Gehl Announces Spreader Winner

The new series of Scavenger V-tank spreaders offer improved performance and enhanced durability. The new auger features segmented paddles that are grouped in a spiral pattern. This flighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading.

WEST BEND, Wis. — Frank James of Meyersdale, Pa. is the lucky winner of six months use of the new Gehl Scavenger® V-tank manure spreader.

A drawing was held in conjunction with the Gehl exhibit at the 1996 Penn State Ag Progress Days.

The new series of Scavenger V-tank spreaders offer improved performance and enhanced durability.

Fred Kuhn, Gehl's V-tank spreader project engineer said, "We took that design and enhanced performance with a unique new round-core auger."

The new auger features segmented paddles that are grouped in a spiral pattern. This flighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading.

"The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller," said Kuhn. "This design breaks up and blends all types of manure."

Gehl's proven Variflo discharge system is 33 percent wider on the most popular sized unit. The expeller has been significantly strengthened and features new aggressive square-tooth expeller paddles.

In addition to improved performance, the new Scavenger has also been re-engineered for added reliability. The main drive components have been beefed-up for extra durability and increased dependability.

Sire Power Provides Performance

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — A review of the July 1996 Sire Summaries shows one unique-sampling program, Sire Power's Genetic Opportunity for Leading Dairyman (GOLD).

An example of Sire Power's efforts to select and reliably sample high quality genetics is PATRON, the Number One Stud Sample, TPI Sire.

GOLD is the only program to have four graduates in the top 20 TPI sires. They are PATRON, SLOCUM, JUDGE, and GRANITE. GOLD's emphasis on quality, not quantity is outdistancing the competition.

9H1729 PATRON's +1509 TPI ranks him as the Number One Stud Sampled Sire for the second summary. He is also the breed's best udder composite sire at +3.05. He is defining total performance at +.07% and +62p, along with a PTAT of +1.86 (86% Reliability). PATRON has positioned himself as one of the elite sires in the breed with 91 daughters in 73 herds and 85% Reliability.

For six consecutive summaries, 9H1489 SLOCUM has been in the top 25 for TPI. His current TPI of +1406, puts him at Number 14. He is the best Cleitus son for TPI and type. His +2091m is combined with a +1.69 PTAT and +1.49 udder composite.

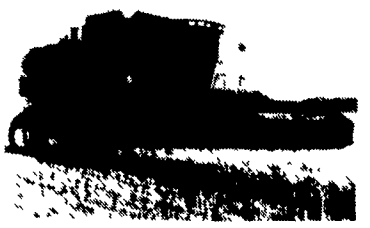
The best Leadman son for feet and legs is 9H1708 JUDGE. His composite of +2.84 ranks him sixth in the breed. He is another sire packed with performance! His +1406 TPI, ranks him 14th on the top 100 TPI list. He is +.01%, +61p, and +1879m. JUDGE is +1.82 on type and an 8% calving ease sire.

A recent GOLD graduate is the highest Aerostar son on the top 100 TPI list for protein. 9H1768 GRANITE is +68p. He is nearly a ton of milk and +$232 (77% Reliability). His type is at +1.57, with four positive composites, including a foot and leg of +1.87. His +1396 TPI, ranks him 17th on the top 100 TPI list. That is not all, he is 8% on calving ease!

The GOLD program has been turning out high quality, reliable performers for a long time. The industry's most successful sampling program has a graduation rate that is nearly impossible to keep pace with. Bulls like OSCAR, CURIOUS and MOUNTAIN graduated from Sire Power's program breed leaders for protein. It is not surprising that at or near 99% reliability they are still great protein improvers. These bulls are a testament to the GOLD program. They are siring the same kind of daughters now that they were when first released.

A key to GOLD graduates being able to stand the test of time is their high reliability. The new reliability rule is to have daughters in 50 herds. According to the NAAB July 1996 Active A.I. List Sire Power leads the industry with 80% of its active Holstein sires having daughters in 50 herds! The Holstein line-ups from Sire Power's competitors range from 3-61%.

Case Improves Combine Comfort, Convenience, Durability



Case IH Axial-Flow® combines — shown here with Case's site-specific farming technology called Advanced Farming Systems — will feature numerous improvements for 1997, including several modifications to the operator environment. Enhancements were also made to improve reliability, serviceability and productivity.

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH Axial-Flow® combines will feature numerous improvements in 1997, according to Sam Acker, Case Corporation manager, new combine products, including several modifications to the operator environment.

"Based on customer input, we've added features and improved not only operator comfort but also the reliability, serviceability and productivity of the combines," he said. "Since their introduction, intensive customer testing and surveying has led the design of the Axial-Flow combines. The 1997 models carry on that tradition."

Among improvements to the cab is the addition of a tilting rear window, a feature that Acker said was requested by customers of Axial-Flow combines.

The new window allows the operator to clean the exterior surfaces of the cab and grain tank windows without having to step outside the cab. He said the bottom of the window tilts outward from the cab to deflect chaff away from the ledge when the window is opened.

Among other improvements to the cab is improved air filtration with a filter that has four times the capacity of the previous filter for a cleaner cab and longer filter service intervals.

Cab noise has been reduced through the addition of an attenuator to the hydro-control circuit. He said the new attenuator reduces noise that is conveyed through the hydraulic system, acting like a hydraulic muffler.

The strength and reliability of key feeder components have been enhanced to increase wear life and improve serviceability. Feeder jackshaft, bearings and pulley are all more durable to provide longer service life.

For improved strength and reliability, the final drive mounting which connects directly to the front axles was increased from a seven-bolt-retention configuration to a 13-bolt-retention design. The axle flange and axle extensions were also made larger.

Shorthorn Association Plans Calf Sale

FREDERICK, Md. — Top-quality Shorthorn steers are entered in the Maryland Shorthorn Association's Fall Club Calf Sale to be held here at the Frederick Fairgrounds, on Saturday, Oct. 26 at 7 p.m.

In the last few years, Shorthorns have made quite an impression on the judges at areas hows and all of these sale calves have the potential to be 1997 show winners.

All steer calves have been halter-broken, dehorned, wormed, and vaccinated for blackleg, BVD, IBR, P13 and BRSV and must have met all state health requirements.

Any steer purchased at this sale will be eligible to compete in the Maryland Shorthorn Association's Incentive Program for the 1997 show season. This program pays $50 to the champion and $25 to the reserve champion shorthorn steer at the Eastern Regional Shorthorn Show, all Maryland county fairs, the Maryland State Fair, and the Eastern National Livestock Show. (Exhibitors may receive only one incentive award at the county fair level.) A new halter, provided by the Maryland Shorthorn Association will be given with each steer purchased.

This year's sale will once again feature a heifer showcase area. Shorthorn breeders will be displaying some of their top quality young heifers which will be available for private treaty sale. All of these heifers were born after September 1995 and will qualify for the 1997 show season. This will give interested persons a chance to see many prospective heifers with the hassle of driving to different farms. These animals will not be going through the auction ring but will be available strictly for private sale. All heifers also meet all state health requirements and will be available for purchasers to take home the night of the sale. Purchases are not limited to 4-H'ers only — anyone is welcome to purchase a heifer from the showcase area.

For more information about the sale, contact Sue Kline, (410) 775-2581, Ray Ediger (301) 898-9945, Bruce Bennett (410) 775-0325, or Terry Sewell (301) 831-1019.

Family Day on the Farm Oct. 20

ELKTON, Md. — The Cecil County Cooperative Extension Service invites everyone to Family Day on the Farm, to be held on Sunday, Oct. 20, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Host for the afternoon is the Buck Family at historic Mt. Ararat Farm, located on the banks of the Susquehanna River near Port Deposit. The rain date is Sunday, Oct. 27. In the event of questionable weather, announcements will be made on WSER Radio (1150 AM) and WXCY Radio (103.7FM).

Many people remember Mt. Ararat Farm for its championship Guernsey cattle and the on-farm dairy plant, which sold milk and ice cream to local residents. Mt. Ararat was a popular Sunday afternoon destination where visitors could enjoy the beautiful scenery and fresh dairy products.

Now modernized, the on-farm dairy plant is closed and milk is shipped to a milk cooperative. The farm is still home to championship Guernseys as well as Holsteins, Jerseys, and Ayrshires in the milk herd of more than 130 cows. Mt. Ararat's 700 acres are devoted to producing grains and feed for the cow herd. Modern crop and livestock production practices are used for top production while protecting and enhancing the environment.

Exciting activities are planned for all ages. Throughout the afternoon, hayride tours will showcase the farms' production practices and some of Cecil County's finest scenery. Back at the barn, guests can watch the afternoon milking, see 4-H'ers fit a cow for the showring, or make their own ice cream. Youngsters can play in our petting zoo.

A number of agricultural organizations will have displays relating to all aspects of agriculture. Free coloring books, milk, and educational materials will be given out.

For more information, contact the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Cecil County, at (410) 996-5280 or (410) 658-4041.

Mt. Ararat is located near the Perryville exit off of I-95 just east of the Tydings Bridge. Take Route 222/275 north, away from Perryville. Follow Route 222 to the left at the blinking light. Mt. Ararat Farm is to the left. Follow signs back to the farm. Ample free parking is available.

FUTURE CONTROL OF PESTS

As I read through the various production publications that I received last week, I came across two unrelated articles that upon closer thought are actually talking about the same topic — future control of pests in crop production.

The first was an article regarding weed control in vegetables and the second discussed the use of mating disruption to control codling moths in pome fruit.

Vegetables

This year was a difficult year for some farmers to control weeds in their vegetable fields. Our abundant rainfall provided ideal conditions for both the weeds and the vegetables to grow well and we all know which plants are more competitive for available space and nutrients.

The excessive rainfall was also responsible for leaching preemergent herbicides out of the upper layers of the soil where they needed to be to prevent weed growth.

What can be done to prevent weed problems from occurring in the next wet growing season? Perhaps not relying on herbicides as the sole method of controlling weeds is the answer.

A recent editorial article in a grower magazine discussed the development of herbicides and the effect it had on weed management procedures in the United States. Initial results with herbicides were so encouraging that many researchers concentrated on developing this new technology to its fullest potential.

Industry concentrated on the use of herbicides because of the profits. This lack of development of alternative methods of weed control has resulted in our present lopsided weed management system.

With the current political environment in regards to the use of chemicals in all agricultural production systems, perhaps now is the time to begin to rethink our approach to weed control and to start developing more of a systems approach.

The term "systems approach" has been appearing in various publications lately and basically refers to the use of more than one method to solve a problem or prevent crop loss. In the case of weed control, alternatives to herbicides that could be used in a systems approach include preventative, mechanical, cultural, biological, chemical, and integrated strategies. Herbicides are still a part of a systems approach but they are not the sole method of controlling weeds in an alternative or integrated weed management strategy.

Our current political environment, spurred on by our increasingly sensitive measurement techniques for chemical residues, is one factor encouraging this new way of approaching crop production. Environmental standards such as water quality are becoming increasingly important measures of the impact of farming on the environment.

You should already see the "handwriting on the wall" as far as chemical control of weeds is concerned. Like many insects, some weed species have developed resistance to the herbicides used to control them, such as triazine-resistant lambsquarters. As a farmer, you are going to need to seek an alternative method of controlling herbicide-resistant weeds anyway so you can benefit now from adopting an integrated approach to weed control and maybe prevent some problems — such as resistance — from developing in the first place.

The fact that we have not eliminated weeds as a pest in our vegetable fields should tell you something about their adaptability to surviving our eradication efforts.

The basic premise of an integrated approach is that you use more than one method to control weeds with the more methods used the better. While weeds can develop resistance to herbicides, they will have a harder time resisting crop rotation and mechanical methods of control when integrated with a standard herbicide program.

As a producer, you receive the benefit of a more effective weed control program while at the same time you are being more "environmentally friendly." Depending on how you market your produce, this may be to your advantage, too. I am constantly reading about marketing programs and buyers looking for "earth-friendly" producers. Rather than fighting this trend, why not take advantage of it?

Researchers do not have all the answers to the questions about the most effective integrated weed control strategies. Future technologies may include weed-competitive crops, biological and ecological weed management, reduced tillage crop production, and precision herbicide application. New EPA pesticide registration rulings may result in the loss of a significant number of our current herbicides in 1997.

Do we want to wait until we have fewer herbicides available to develop new technologies? I doubt it.

I suspect many of you have already integrated several weed control strategies into your current vegetable production system and thus you have already developed the start of a systems approach. If you haven't, I'd encourage you to start reading about and experimenting with new weed control methods in your vegetable production system.

Fruit

The use of mating disruption to control codling moths in pome fruit is not a new technology. However, early trials with the use of pheromones met with mixed results.

While these compounds affected only the target species of pests, in many cases they failed to give satisfactory control of fruit damage, especially when compared to conventional chemical controls. But now the traditional method of using broad-spectrum insecticides to control this pest is coming under scrutiny and, as a result, alternative control measures are being examined.

A magazine article recently discussed research being conducted in Washington state combining the technology of mating disruption with traditional insecticide applications to control codling moths. The first generation of moths is controlled with an insecticide timed to coincide with peak moth flight if population levels are too high. Later generations are then controlled with pheromones and overall insecticide use in these orchards is reduced.

Early failures of mating disruption were frequently linked to high first generation populations of moths. By combining pheromone and chemical control methods, satisfactory control of moth damage is achieved while reducing insecticide applications.

As this research indicates, sometimes the combination of differing methods to control an orchard pest give excellent results with a reduced "environmental" impact. Now is a good time to start looking at combinations of control methods to reduce losses from other orchard pests and the environmental impacts associated with traditional control methods.

YOU'LL LIKE HOW IT TURNS. AS WELL AS WHAT IT TURNS INTO.

One thing you'll appreciate about Case skid steers is how well they maneuver. Thanks to their responsive steering and overall compact size, they have the agility and the power to get the job done. Especially in limited space. Even more impressive is how many jobs they can master. Every Case skid steer is designed to power a long list of profit-producing attachments. So whether the task involves lifting, digging, spreading or cutting, Case machines get it done. And our quick-change coupling systems let you switch attachments fast. Plus, all Case skid steers, from our rugged 18 horsepower gas model to our 56 horsepower diesel, provide the ultimate in power, durability and reliability. In fact, we offer more horsepower than the competition in almost every class. And every model is backed by the best parts, service and financing in the industry. Because our feeling is that dealer support should be every bit as strong and versatile as the machines themselves. So visit your Case dealer and find out more about our full line of skid steers. You'll like them for what they are. And especially for what they become.

KUBOTA'S HIGH EFFICIENCY, LOW NOISE TRACTOR

Kubota's new B2400 (24 HP) multi-functional tractor is extremely versatile and efficient, yet quietly powerful. Equipped with Kubota's new E-TVCS 3-cylinder, liquid-cooled low emissions - "low noise" engine and an enclosed muffler and enclosed exhaust pipe.
Available in both 2WD and 4WD, a hydrostatic transmission - single pedal control of tractor speed and direction with no clutch, and Kubota's Bi-Speed Turn (reducing front wheel resistance) is optional.
Power steering, mid- and rear-PTO, operator comfort features, Kubota's performace-matched loaders and a line of heavy-duty implements enhance production and efficiency.

EARTH METAL® — A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

Case International Earth M etal disk blades do make a world of difference on a tandem disk harrow.

An innovative, patented process reduces the sulfides in steel that create fracture points in conventional blades. Remaining sulfides are left in random, non-directional globules. You don't have to be a chemist to understand what this means. Longer wear - up to 20% longer, And, 60% greater shock resistance.

And, our unique shallow concavity, crimped-center blades, cut drawbar pull by 33% (compared to conical blades) and by more than 50% compared to spherical blades. That's fuel savings on top of longer wear and greater shock resistance.

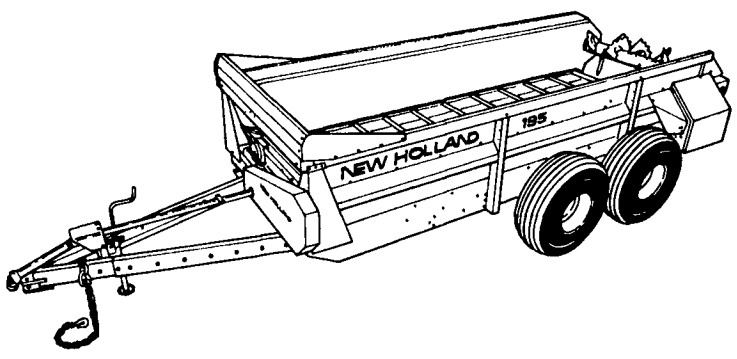
CAPACITY KING



THE BIGGEST

The New Holland Model 195 box spreader is up to your biggest spreading job.

- Capacity. The "195" takes on 410 bushels (440 cu. ft.) without flinching.
- Strong construction. Corrosion-resistant steels last and last. And an HDPE floor means smooth unloading, even in cold weather.
- Bonded Protection warranty. If the polyethylene floor fails or the sides rust, we'll replace them free for 12 years.
- Fast clean out...even with this big-capacity strong box.
- Large tandem oscillating wheels. Allow faster ground speeds in rough terrain, with less ground compaction.

8011L • 81 HP
UTILITY SERIES TRACTORS
9011L • 98 HP

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011L's turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

GREAT TRACTOR.

The New White 6045 ROPS. When you're working in and under low overheads, this low profile 45 PTO hp tractor is a great value for today's farmer. The 6045 gives you a low profile straddle mount and a 12F/12R synchronized reverser transmission to change direction in any gear. For reliable power, there's a liquid-cooled diesel engine. And its true center line power front axle with a 50-degree turning angle helps you get around the tight spaces. Plus, the 6045 has a 2-year/2000-hour AGCO warranty on 100% parts and labor, with no deductible. Climb into a 6045 at your local White dealer. And ask about flexible Agricredit financing plans, offering low rates and waiver of interest contracts.

Reaching the top is easier if you have the AGCO® Allis 7600 tractor pulling you up.

Make Your Way Up Your Own Corporate Ladder.

The 89 PTO hp engine has the power to muscle through most any job. This multi-purpose, row-crop tractor has a standard synchronized transmission with 24 forward and 12 reverse speeds. For your convenience, you can choose between the cab or rops with an optional canopy.

- A direct air-cooled diesel engine powers the tractor and delivers maximum strength through the full speed range. So you're able to get more work done using less fuel, doing less shifting and requiring less effort to operate the tractor
- This also lets you match engine power to ground speeds for more efficient field work
- The AWD models feature true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance
- Like always, every AGCO Allis tractor comes with a 4-year/ 4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer

To see what the 7600 tractor can do for you, just stop by and see us You'll be surprised at how fast you'll climb.

NEW MAXEMERGE® PLUS PLANTERS

PUT THE INDUSTRY'S TOUGHEST ROW UNITS TO WORK IN YOUR TOUGHEST CONDITIONS

Stronger mount and heavier-duty down-force system tackle no-till fields

- Welded mount maintains row-unit position
- Apply as much as 400 pounds of down-force per row to penetrate tough conditions

Cast closing-wheel arm and staggered closing wheels take on heavy trash

- Cast arm maintains alignment over the furrow
- Stagger the closing wheels for better trash flow

Introducing the all-new MaxEmerge Plus Planters. With over a dozen improvements, these planters have no equal in strength, convenience, and accuracy.

A stronger frame mounting bracket keeps each row unit in place. A reinforced shank provides unyielding strength on rolling ground and tough soils.

The cast closing-wheel arm keeps a more consistent alignment over the furrow. And you can stagger closing wheels for better trash flow.
